In 1928 we had a very bad year for the first time in my memory. The weather was extremely dry and hot, and there was a great deal of dust. The crops suffered greatly, especially the wheat, which was almost entirely lost. The price of grain was very low, and many farmers were unable to pay their debts. The situation was particularly difficult for those who had taken out loans to buy land or equipment. The government did what it could to help, but the overall impact was devastating.
