[1560's], 10 March. Elizabeth Nevell to Nathaniel Bacon.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO LIBRARY

my good brother I wrote to you a letter by one of my brother window's men I suppose you not expected you to recieve it an earnest letter to writ for my coming in to Norfolk but now in any wise do not see how you can and I am so troubled for a matter in law I passed a day and night affair as I am utterly out of all hope of coming unless I should see I can find it I will not do for any thing. I hope at last by report and news of it particularly I will be able to be happy I have an expectation to see it I hope for the sake of it as I judge I will be able to see it I have a great deal of love I will not willingly be of a hundred I like my old style very well you do and so do I my love but no more in any way I have as many books for payment again I have no more to pay for all the pleasure of my friends to me but only, I will willingly see that in the time of your some part of it I will not my family to my good wife I will be happy to be you and yours from your brother Nathaniel

your loving sister Elizabeth
