My dear Sir

I met Mr Jervis Mr found to my delight he was the

My excuse for thrusting myself on your notice. I have been appointed Hulsean lecturer of this year as you will see from enclosed cuttings of the Times & Spectator to preach four essay sermons on 'Some after thoughts of Theology'

Theology as I take it is the doctrine of God & his Fatherly relation to man and streams direct from eternal son of Father & thus is eternal life as St John expresses it. But the 'after thoughts of Theology' are those defences & networks of the truth as if it needed defences at all which has ^{developed into} ~~resulted in~~ two distinct types of religion - a Book Religion & a Church Religion

CAMBRIDGE, FEB. 15.
The Rev. John Hickford Heard, M.A., of Gonville and Caius College, has been elected Hulsean lecturer for 1892. The Hulsean lecturer is appointed for one year only and receives about £70, his duty being to preach at least four sermons during his year of office times prescribed by the authority of the University, but he is not required to print or publish the sermons.
It is proposed to form a committee to to do it & send down opposition of a claim of infallibility either of Book or of Church. There are other 'after thoughts' all growing out of the dogmatic deductive method which has been the base of systematic theology & which has culminated in an Eucharistology too dangerous even for Darwin & which like his has ended in being captured away into a mere allegory. Then the circle has been run round from Dogmatism to Scepticism, & sailing on to the west we come back to the start.

This is a critical & my subject which I should like to see in a condensed form in the Cotemp^y & afterwards expanded into a 51 book which I should offer to publish.

If you would kindly let me know if the Cotemp^y would take a first draft & send a sketch I should feel obliged & on my return to London hope to see you and thank you as by

Dear Mr. Bunting

A very remarkable book has appeared in Germany - entitled, Sie müssen, - "They must", by a Swiss Pastor, Hermann Küttler, minister at the Neumünster, Zurich. He appears to be a man of faith, and originality, for he does not seem to belong to any theological party, ^{but} to hold the essential thoughts in all. As far as I can see and I hardly think anyone in this country has gone over the book so many times, as I have, consequent on making a a translation for English readers, Kutter is just the writer to appeal to the more Evangelical section of this country.

Casual readers skim the book superficially or glance over the excerpts given in the American Puffs, I send you with this, and imagine him a Swiss W. Campbell. But I do not see this in him at all but rather a man who sees into the profound depths of the Pauline theology and of the Person of Jesus Christ, and because he sees so profoundly, speaks so clearly and simply.

But the peculiarly interesting fact about him is that during the last ten years, during which he has been a Lutheran pastor, he has become a socialist and it is not difficult to see that it is his intense scripturalness combined with the democratic character of the population he ministers to, which has brought it about.

And now he stands one of the first to show, what I believe will one day be seen, that there is no form of Christianity which combines so harmoniously with modern Socialism as the Evangelical Creed, understood in all the free thought and breadth of Paul.

I have ^{another} a book of his - Christliche ~~the~~ in which he dwells on the rightness -ness of God as the great remedy for the universal injustice that prevails the world - which I am hoping to translate as likely to throw much light on his ideas. And I am further in such friendly relations with him that I could turn to him personally for elucidation on any apparent obscurity.

Do you not think there is enough in what I have said to warrant you in giving me a Commission to write an article on Kutter's ideas on Modern Christianity and the Social Question - or what would be more true to Kutter's thought: "God in Present-Day Socialism." I do not mean this as a

Heath

title, but rather ^{as} a summary of her book "They Must". He believes that the German Social-Democrats, in spite of themselves are doing God's work - "they must".

The American translation is not mine, but that of an American friend.
Mine is of the complete work, I could send you the original book, if you would like to look over it.

Yours sincerely

Dear Mr. Bunting

The enclosed is a proof of the short Preface to my new book now printed. As I meant on your name in it, I thought I should like you to see what I say, that I might if possible, bring it ~~more~~ ^{entirely} into harmony with your view of the situation. I am sincerely grateful to you for so many years of confidence, but feel that to go beyond such a formal expression of thanks as I here give, might seem committing ^{you} to some responsibility with reference to the book.

Hoping to be able soon to send you a copy of the book, and that when you read it, you will be able to recognize it as one of the good fruits of the great Contemporary tree, I remain, with very kind regards to you and to Mr. Bunting, yours sincerely

Dear Mr. Bunting

Thank you very much for your letter. I understand the danger of being misunderstood about the immanence of God in man. It seems to follow naturally that if he is immanent in Man, he is immanent both in the oppressor and the oppressed. Hence the anguish of his suffering which even now he bears, there is pain. There is a passage in Amos (11-6-13) which vividly represents the suffering God endures from dwelling in oppressors: "I am pressed under you" he cries to an oppressive Israel, "as a cart is pressed under sheaves". Kindest regards to you and Mr. Bunting.

Dear Sir Percy Bunting

About two years ago I came across a remarkable work on Socialism called Sie Muesen. In common with friends in France and America, I was so interested that I obtained two other of the author's works, one published previously and the ^{other} subsequently, all three ^{being} really connected. I then thought of publishing a translation of Sie Muesen, and later on ~~of~~ summaries of all three.
I attempted to gather up the general results in a preface and now it is done, I feel the first thing to do is to offer it to you for the Contemporary Review.

The peculiar interest of the works I here signal and try to expound, is that they come from a man who is in deep sympathy with the old faith, at any rate, experimentally, which is the important thing.

Two or three days ago I read an article by Prof. Wm James in "Herrick", on a certain German philosopher, and what James says of his author, exactly applies to me - "the impression he gives is that of a man who does not live at second hand, but who sees, who in fact speaks as a prophet".

The conviction of such a man that Social Democracy as he knows it in Germany and Switzerland, is a movement of which the source is as truly in God as that of the Reformation, is worthy of serious consideration.

Not that he asserts this of the Marxian doctrine, but rather of the movement itself, as coming from the heart of the working classes of Christendom.

Sie Mussen has now been translated and published in France, Holland and America, and though its admirers are naturally Christian Socialists, its power has been recognised by the foremost ^{some of} ~~the~~ ^{Socialist} readers in France and Germany. Kutter, however, is not a member of any Socialist group whatever, his role is that of a Christian minister.

With very kind regards to yourself and Lady Bunting in which Nellie unites I remain Sincerely yours

Dear Sir Percy Bunting

Excuse my not having acknow-ledged the receipt of the returned MS as once, but I have had to set over the pain it caused me. However I did not build much upon it. Not that I thought you would say there was no-thing fresh in it, but that the position Kutter had reached was of too tre-mendous a character to have its first utterance in England in "the Contemporary Review.

I have not the least idea of trying to alter your mind, but only would like to say that I consider Kutter's book exceptionally strong and unique, especially as a pronouncement from an Evangelical source in favour of Social Democracy.

In doing this he has brought out to an extent I never met with anywhere else, the idea that Christ by his Passion, Death and Resurrection has overcome Sin, and even though it still flourishes for want of complete faith ⁱⁿ it, it has lost its importance as a factor in human life. - God's righteousness always really triumphing in the long run.

The certainty of this, - because the only real life in the World is the Living God, - Kutter brings out in such a powerful manner that though like all great truths it is ancient enough, he makes one feel as before a new sunrise.

And it is something fresh to feel that that Living God is so in us, that to find him, is to find one self. And as Kutter points out this is exactly what Jesus did. In finding himself he found that he and the Father were one. On the other hand and upon the same ground Jesus lays claim to unity with all men, - "I in them and them in me that they may be made perfect in one. Doubtless these truths are not new, but in Kutter they have the freshness reality always brings.

And thus Kutter compels the reader to feel that the Living God is the only thing that matters, - that where he is, there is life, where he is not, there is death. This gives profound importance to his assertion that the great fact of our day is that the Living God is working through the Social Democracy

H. E. S. H.

4-7-09

It never occurred to me to imagine before I read it in Hutter that God was setting aside the purely individualistic Society which is called Christendom, and choosing a new instrument for the great purpose of making real the Gospel of the King-dom of Heaven. That just as in Apostolic days he said the Jews do not understand what is happening in the world, they are so taken up with their own importance, I must call out a people from among the heathen who will proclaim to the whole world that in Jesus, she is saved if it will only believe it; - so to day Christendom is being left without the Living God, and the Social Democracy called to do its work.

9-7-09

I am not writing this, as already said, to affect your decision, but simply because I cannot admit that ~~that~~ paper contained nothing fresh, nothing but what I have said over and over again.

On the contrary it appears to me that the freshness and serious importance of all Kutter says is the very difficulty I really have to contend with in trying to make him known to British Christians.

With very kind regards to yourself and Lady Bunting I remain

Dear Sir

My husband, Professor and Helmholtz, is much honoured by your wish to have an article of his for the Contemporary unfortunately it is not in his power to gratify it even on a subject so especially deep by its nature and near to his own interests as a paper on Prof. Tyndall would be.

Professor Helmholtz has not quite recovered his strength since he went with an arrow wound on board ship in September and has been forbidden all experimental labour as such an article would bring pain. The doctors are quite struck in their wishes in this respect.

So I have to tell you all my husband's regrets and his thanks for having thought of him for fulfilling this tribute to Ceyndall's memory.

With my husband's best regards I

Dear Sir,

I have been surprised to find with a curious stretch of memory, I find your note of the 12th. forgotten in the way & consequently abandoned after a sudden impulse.

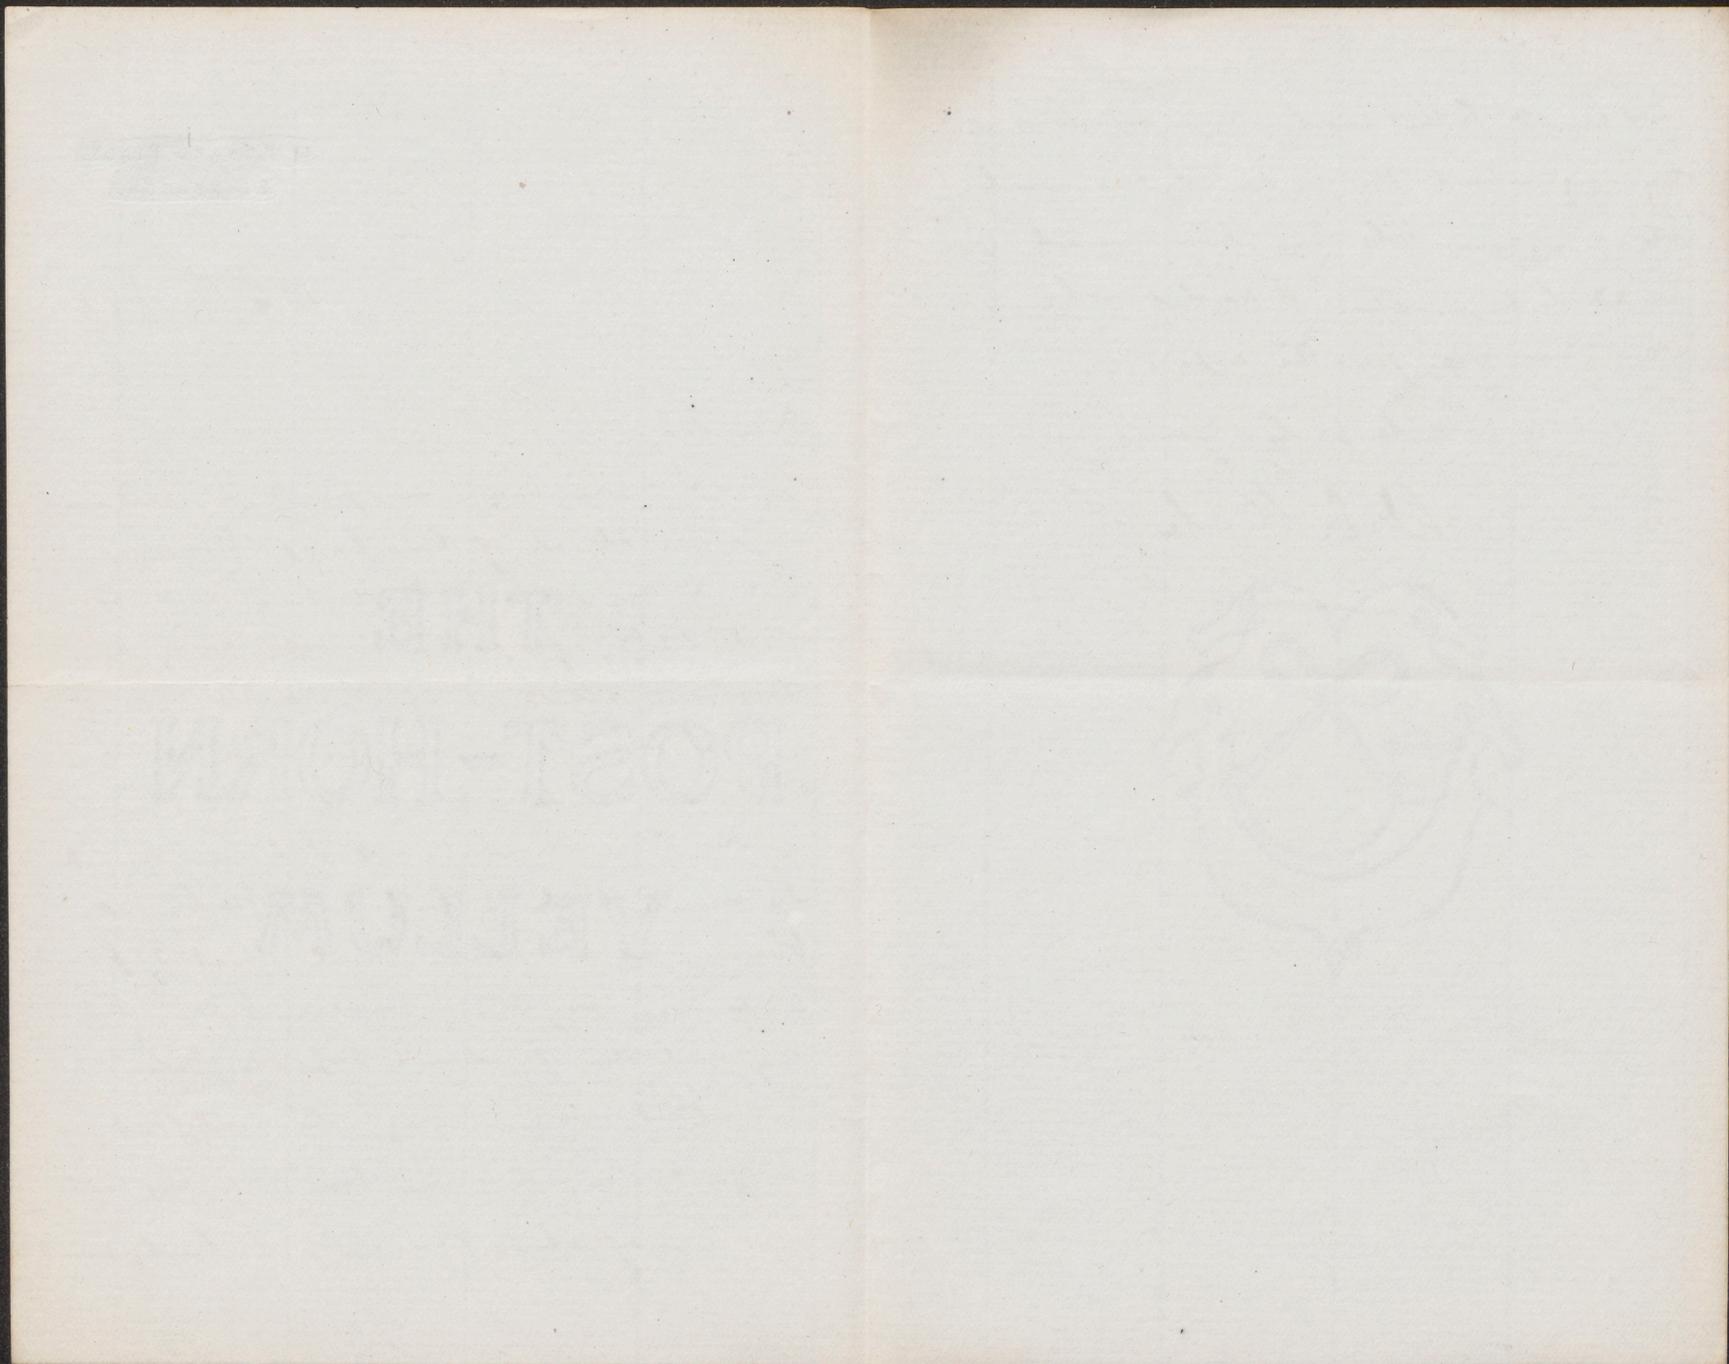

I fear it is now too late to be in season with an article on the subject of The Little Ministers; & I have, besides, so much to do to keep the National Observer at a certain level, that I fear to promise anything, however brief, at any but the furthest possible date.

But, as you say, the subject is a good one; I have the very highest opinion of Mr. Barnes's talent; and I should like well enough to say my say about the man & his work.

Please, then, tell me how much you would like written & asked when you can give me for the copy.

Very faithfully Yours,

Dear Sir,

I don't know if you deal in books. If you do, it came to me this song of the sword in the Contemporary, I shall be glad to see it there. I should like it, however, to appear in your next (March) verses which I am pushing through the

Dear Sir,

May I venture to ask whether the pages of the Contemporary Review would, under any circumstances, be open to an attempt to make Ibsen's admitted masterpiece, Brand, better known to English readers?
Although familiar by name to everyone, and the subject of numerous articles, it remains inaccessible to the English reader. It is, as a verse drama, necessarily excluded from Mr Archer's edition.

I have however a version of the most important & powerful scene in the tragedy, a scene capable of being detached without great difficulty from the rest, — together with a prose introduction. This has been revised by Mr Archer, and we have both spared neither time nor effort to make it, as far as it goes, an adequate representation of its original. I may say that it differs altogether in tendency from any of the later dramas of Ibsen.

I should be very glad, if you think proper, to submit to you a type-written copy, with a view to its publication, should you approve it, in the Contemporary Review. I am, dear Sir,

Yours faithfully

Dear Mr Bunting,

It has occurred to me that an interesting article might be written on T. E. Brown, the Author of Betsy Leigh, and other poems, who died suddenly about a fortnight ago. I daresay you know about him. His poems have been published in several volumes by Macmillan, and those who knew him intimately are of opinion that he was one of the most remarkable men of our time. If Mr Hall Caine could be persuaded to write an article on him he ought to be able to make it really attractive, and as he was a neighbour and friend of Mr Brown in the Isle of Man I should think he would be willing to do it, if you care to ask for anything of the kind.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

J. Hereford
