A CENTURY OF PROGRESS EMERGENCY HOSPITAL

A Century of Progress Hospital, situated on the ground floor of the Hall of Science, was established to care for emergency cases during the building, operation and demolition of the fair. No detail was ignored in its planning.

Facilities for all probable cases are provided. During the the 1933 Exposition over sixteen thousand patients were treated. Of these, about three thousand were cases of fatigue or faintness for which a short rest and soothing treatment were indicated. There were, however, cases where x-ray, fracture reduction and temporary treatment was given before removal to a local hospital. No cases are kept over night.

The Hospital is under the administration of Dr. F. W. Baylor. It is open for inspection by members of the hospital field but is not open to the public.

Of particular interest is the Model Operating Room in the exhibit of the Electric Light and Power Industry in the Electrical Building, designed by Carl A. Erikson of Schmidt, Garden and Erikson, Architects, Chicago. It was designed to fill every requirement. The exhibit is constructed on a reduced scale, one-quarter actual size. The instruments were made to scale by V. Mueller & Co.

On the main floor in the northwest section of the Hall of Science is a rotunda. Surrounding the rotunda are eight pillars. Here you will find the V. Mueller & Co. exhibition of the most recent improvements in surgical instruments, supplies, and apparatus. . . . Other exhibits by V. Mueller & Co. will be found in the booths of the American Urological Association, Chicago Hospital Association, the Century of Progress Emergency Hospital, all in the Hall of Science, in the Infant Incubator Hospital and Ford Motor Co. Building. We trust you will visit these interesting displays as well as our main display rooms at Ogden Avenue, Van Buren and Honore Streets.
