Hon. S. A. Douglass

Dear Sir,

On Tuesday evening last one wing of the Buchanan party held a meeting at Morgan Hall to address Gov. & his Leocompton Honors Constitution. The meeting was a perfect failure in numbers, speeches and enthusiasm.

On Thursday evening the other wing held a meeting at Nassau Hall for the same purpose. Although better attended and more speeches from men of more ability and talent than at Morgan Hall, yet it was a poor meeting for old Garrison. The heart was not in it. The object of the two meetings was to carry favor with Buchanan & influence appointments to certain offices. The arguments with which you oppose the admission of Kansas under the Leocompton Constitution is a thing that cannot be done. You hope for them & they know it. The President of the Senate may treat you dishonorably. Senators may attempt to circumvent you. Hurling Editors may abuse you. Members of the House may call you traitor. Well, let them do it. Still you the people are with you and are going to continue with you until the polls are closed in Nov. 1860. Go ahead! You know and the people know you are right. Breathe the parties in the crime of imposing a ~~bothersome~~ Constitution upon the people of Kansas or any other State, against the will of the majority, in their own dens. Let them rail and oppose but, give them a little more rope, Capt. Douglass!

Yours
Very Respectfully

Since reading in the telegraph despatch the account of the Pacific Hotel disaster and death of Henry E. Rodden (I have strong), at St Louis, I have been revolving in my mind whether I should communicate to the authorities at that place an incident in the life of those men ^{connected} to throw light upon that tragedy. After reflection I determine to write to you. In so doing I offer no apology. Trusting that you will not take it amiss.

The Weyandine Bridge tragedy and death of Timmermann the burning of M O Walker's building in Chicago in winter of 55-6 that they might drag me before the authorities there and tamper with and immerse me under the sheer pretence that I wouldn't work on the engines at a fire of their ^{own} creating; when the true secret was that I wouldn't serve them in a different capacity. The sending to Chicago Theodore Parker of Boston M Hall (Presbyterian) of Rochester to waylay me at that time. The subsequent poisoning of myself by a methodist ^{priest} also sent from the East, and the fact that when day-light came the next morning after leaving there the engine was brought to a stand by being thrown off the track upon the high embankment between Chicago and Detroit, in order to show me how easily they could destroy me. Such circumstances as these together with a most eventful life have made me familiar with such incidents and their careers as the late disastrous fire at St Louis. When the old Federal

Dear Sir:

I know that a man conscientiously engaged in the discharge of his public duties finds his strength in the rectitude of his intentions, but it is pleasing to a public servant to know that his acts meet with approval. Your present conflict with fraud induces me to send you such information of the Democratic sentiment as must be pleasing. Enclosed I send you a Communication of mine published in the Government organ the News which is the sentiment of two thirds of the democrats of the County. My relations to the party are such that they will publish my articles, without approving of them. Both of the Democratic journals here are living on government "pale". I do not expect or desire you to lose any time in acknowledging the receipt of my letters. Do your duty, and you will have your reward.

Friday Evening, March 5, 1858.

The Proposed Change in the City Charter.

At last we have brought our morning Republican cotemporary to an acknowledgment that there is a scheme on foot for the above named object. Its leader this morning in reply to our article of a few evenings ago, is in the usual vague, indefinite style adopted by the Gazette whenever it wishes to dodge a question. But its recollection has been slightly refreshed in regard to this important municipal movement—it has a faint idea that some such scheme is on foot—has “glanced” over one of the petitions for it, some of which have laid in several of our stores for the long period of a week—does not know how many signatures they got or whose they were—does not seem to know much about the contents of these petitions, but is on the whole of the opinion that the proposed amendments were “proper and such as must be acceptable to a majority of the people.” To show how pointed the remarks of the Gazette are, we quote a passage from its leader of this morning, almost the only part referring to this plan of the Republican party. Here it is:

“Petitions for the alteration of our City Charter laid in several of our stores a week for signatures, and many of the people doubtless attached their names to these petitions—to what extent we do not know.—We glanced over one of these petitions, and it appeared to us that the proposed amendments were proper, and such as must be acceptable to the majority of the people.”

And these are the first and only allusions made to a matter of such great interest to our citizens by our Republican neighbors, though they confess they were cognizant of what was going on all the while. The first intimation that the “majority” of the people (to whom the Gazette opines the amendments will be so acceptable,) had of this movement was through our columns. And not until yesterday, after it had appeared in the public prints that Mr. Thompson of Scott county had introduced into the House these petitions and that they had been referred to the Judiciary Committee, was it that our neighbor came out and acknowledged the attempt to smuggle through the Legislature an amendment of our City Charter. This is the way our Republican representatives treat the wishes of the people, which they profess to be so anxious to carry out. Now if these amendments were so very “PROPER AND ACCEPTABLE,” why not say something in their favor; why not submit them to the people, and tell us folks who are in the dark what they are? Out with it, Mr. Gazette, and make a clean breast of the whole transaction! Tell us who got up these petitions, how they were gotten up, who “doubtless” signed them, and what were their contents.

And now the Gazette, with consummate art, bring out its defence of this Republican game of “hide and seek.” Here it is, with a respectful allusion to the City Council:

“The people have no very great confidence in this body, anyhow, and have been misrepresented by them so often that it is not a subject of complaint if in this matter they prefer being the direct representatives of their own feelings. Whatever action they took on this subject had to be prompt to secure the attention of the Legislature before its adjournment. A public discussion (and a direct vote of the people upon the proposed amendments could not have been taken until after a prolonged and thorough discussion,) would have utterly prevented any legislative action this session.”

Imprimis, the people have no confidence in the City Council. Now that is decidedly rich, and will pass as one of the Gazette’s assertions. Again, the action had to be prompt. Of course; hence the rapidity of the flight of these petitions to Fort Des Moines before we knew it. Finally, “public discussion” and a “direct vote of the people,” “after a prolonged and thorough discussion,” “would have utterly prevented any legislative action.” Of this last we were already aware, and thank you for your candor in the admission. It is really the best reason the Republican politicians who concocted the scheme had for their haste and unseemly concealment. Had their plans seen the light of day here, or the matter been submitted to the people, the Legislature would not have been troubled with the matter. “There is something rotten in Denmark.”

✂ We publish another article to-day from our Douglas friend who signs himself “Democrat.” He is a thorough-paced Democrat and a warm friend of the Administration, though taking Mr. Douglas’ view of the Lecompton controversy. We agree with “Democrat” in his views of the silly attempt to read that portion of the Democracy who agree with him out of the party. Just as well might the attempt be made to read out each and every Democrat who voted or spoke against any Administration measure—just as well read out the Southern member of the Democratic party who opposed the Administration in reference to “Fillibusterism,” or, as “Democrat” says, the Northern men who voted against the Army Bill. We are an Administration man, but do not believe in this “reading out” process, nor do we believe that the administration sanctions or approves it.

We must thank “Another Democrat” for his able defence of the President, so forcibly written. His views and our own are coincident, and we hope he will be kind enough to furnish us with more articles, which are always welcome. For the benefit of our readers we would say that in “Another Democrat” Scott county recognizes one of the boldest and ablest champions of the Democracy, who, with LEONARD, and CLARK, and DODGE, and BROWN, has long fought and bore the brunt of the battles of our party here. We feel sure that the great mass of the Democratic party all over the country sustain Mr. Buchanan’s Kansas policy on the same ground and with the same views as “Another Democrat” does. We shall always be most happy to hear from “Another Democrat.”

“I hope you will be able to support me,” said a lady while walking out with her intended, during a slippery state of the sidewalks.

“Why, yes,” said the somewhat hesitating swain, “with some little assistance from your father.”

For the Daily Evening News.

Messrs. Editors:—

The defeat of the Army Bill, so earnestly recommended by the Administration, to provide the necessary troops for securing a speedy reduction and subjugation of the refractory rebels of Utah, is suggestive of serious reflections.

It is a rebellion, not a foreign war, that produced such Congressional aversion to the augmentation of Federal troops. The regular standing Army has heretofore been held sufficient for the suppression of any internal rebellion. An Army, in a Republic, is justly deemed an evil which in times of peace ought not too become too powerful. The President is the Commander-in-Chief; as such, an unscrupulous and ambitious Executive might imitate the example of a Caesar or a Santa Anna. Especially in a country like our own, would a large standing Army, as an auxiliary to the Executive, be dangerous. The Army of France is the tyrant of France. The public liberties seem to flourish in proportion to the paucity of the national soldiery. In England the Army is small, the press and people are free, and yet the nation is powerful in all its foreign wars.

The Army Bill before the Senate proposed to augment the standing Army to a permanent force of 25,000 men. This was the mistake of the authors of the Bill. If the Bill had simply proposed the enlisting of volunteers to serve during the “Utah war,” then to be disbanded, it would have passed the Senate with great unanimity.

But there is another feature of this act and its defeat in the Senate, of which I desire to speak. It was an Administration measure, specially recommended by the President, as necessary to the success of the Utah expedition, and yet, in a Senate largely Democratic, a large number of Democratic Senators mercilessly voted against the measure, at the risk of becoming obnoxious to the charge so glibly made against Senator Douglas, for a like act in opposing the Administration measure of Lecompton. Will the Washington Union, N. Y. Herald, and the subordinate suburban journals of the Democracy, commence the “reading out” process of those Democratic Senators who have thus defeated an Administration measure?

The truth lies in a nut-shell: a combined effort was made, under cover of the fraudulent Lecompton Constitution, to drive Senator Douglas from the consistency of his position on the Kansas act. As “popular sovereignty” became more, nay, almost universally popular, and Douglas began to recover from his exhausting labors in its defence, Presidential aspirants sought to devise a means of “killing him off.” The Jack Calhoun swindle was devised, and the Lecompton monstrosity presented to him for his acceptance or rejection. He brought that instrument to the touch stone of the Kansas act, found it antagonistic and in deadly hostility to the true intent and meaning of “popular sovereignty,” and he fearlessly and promptly took his position in defence of the Kansas act. Then commenced the baying of hounds let loose upon him by the Southern Democracy, lead on by that abominable Scotch terrier, James Gordon Bennett, and encouraged by journals which one year ago found language inadequate to sufficiently eulogise Senator Douglas.

Three-fourths of the Northern Democracy are the friends of the principles defended by Mr. Douglas. In Iowa, the Democratic members of the Legislature, with the exception of five, are still true to the doctrine of “popular sovereignty.” Thus will the Northern Democracy show to the people of the South and of the whole Union, that they pursue no selfish line of policy—they will ask nothing of Congress which cannot Constitutionally and honorably be granted, and grant nothing to the South which ought not to be granted. While the Northern Democracy are not the friends of slavery, they are still the steady defenders of the Constitutional rights of the slave States. But the Northern Democracy cannot be driven or cajoled into support of a measure secured by the worst forms of fraud, merely to give an advantage to the political equilibrium of the slave States. The South is demanding too much.

In Kansas the Legislature authorized the holding of a Constitutional Convention.—The Convention formed a Constitution. The Legislature fixed the time of submitting that Constitution to the people for Jan. 4, 1858. It was submitted by the Convention on December 21, 1857, and received 6,147 votes. This vote was illegal, but it made Kansas a slave State, and that was enough for Southern Congressmen. The vote was taken on this Constitution Jan. 4, 1858, and the Constitution repudiated by 10,064 majority. This vote was legal.—Why should Northern Congressmen not repudiate the former and sustain the latter? The last vote makes Kansas free. A majority of the legal voters of Kansas is hostile to Lecompton, and that hostility has been legally expressed. That is Squatter Sovereignty. Douglas demands that its voice shall not be strangled by the clamors of fire-eaters. Will Northern Democrats sustain Douglas and free Kansas, or Jack Calhoun and Lecompton fraud?

DEMOCRAT.

THE MAJORITY.—We all ought to know what these two little words signify: but six months additional controversy in Kansas about their meaning, we much fear will overthrow all past conceptions of their proper place in the English language. The word majority, in reference to elections, signifies the greater of two parties, or one party exceeding all others in numbers. The poll-lists must be consulted to ascertain who are on the side of the majority. In all political affairs, the rule of the majority is acknowledged as the basis of our representative democracy; but it is also acknowledged that voters alone can be counted. Any persons refusing to vote are to be counted, it is manifest we can have no elections. The republican press, and some of our democratic friends, talk about their majorities in Kansas with as much confidence and authority as if they had just footed up election returns.—Now, we want to know what your majorities were in June last, when you notoriously refused to vote at the election of delegates to the constitutional convention? What were your majorities on the 21st of December, when you refused to vote again upon the constitution then just framed? Where, indeed, do you find your majorities? Are they voters? That is an important question—are they voters? If they are voters, then tell us if they voted on the 15th of June?—for that was precisely the time to be felt. If they did not vote, how have you packed them into a majority? We really would like to know,—[Washington Union.]

Hon Stephen D. Douglas Dear Sir, I am under many obligations to you for past favors.

I am rejoiced that you have taken a bold stand against the Sumner band. Stand firm and the victory is ours. I would like to have a copy of your report on Kansas affairs if you could send it to me. I may say that your course is universally approved here by all parties.

Please send me a copy of your report and greatly oblige.

Yours truly
