My dear Sir,

I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind presents. I find in them to me the right idiom, the idiom of the heart, but one grain of disappointment, namely, the absence of a small feed parcel labelled Old Out. Am I to infer that you imagine me to have a sufficient stock of that article still on hand, or have you none to spare from the store you have in reserve for your own holiday purposes?

I am glad to learn that you are so near Mr. Lincoln, to aid him in the eloquence of voice and pen in his noble mission. Before that all reflecting from the true Church and State should acquiesce to his, higher, and, reflecting back to their preexisting position, projected hereafter in the

My Dear Sir,

I am exceedingly grateful to you for your kind presents. I find in them to me the right idiom, the idiom of the heart, but one grain of sympathy brought home, the absence of a small feed parcel labelled Did Duty. Am I to infer that you imagine me to have a sufficient stock of that article still on hand in my own, or have you come to spare from the store you have in reserve for your own holiday purposes?

I am glad to learn that you are so near Mr. Lincoln, to aid him with your eloquence of voice and pen in his truly inspiring desire that all seceders from the true Church and State should accede to his, trier, and, seceding back to their preexisting position, proceed hereafter in the
