Dear Sir

As your presence I have not a moment before replying to your polite note of this Morning.

I cannot from personal recollection vouch the accuracy of an event which I am informed occurred on the 17th of March 1803 that for many years my birth has been celebrated on that day

My dear Colonel,

I am much surprised that I should have had no answer to my two letters. I fear I have no alternative but to consider your silence as a refusal of the terms, as Fred says I am to do, and to beg you to return me the papers as soon as you possibly can. I wish you could have decided otherwise for your own sake - as you have everything to lose, by not accepting what you told me your friends considered a fair proposal. If you decide to accept, you of course get the dividend payable next month.

If I do not hear from you Monday or Tuesday, I instruct my lawyers on Wednesday, as the settlements have to be drawn up at once.

Faithfully yours

My dear Colonel.

As you no longer want the papers, will you kindly return them? I thought I should have had them back yesterday. I think it is a pity you would not let me see any of your friends on the subject - However, it is at an end now.

the sake of "Auld Lang Syne" you will not refuse it, is to interest your-self with we may forestall other applicants.

At present there is no vacancy

In an article on this subject in the National Review Mr R. Staples says that upon the revolt of the American colonies, for the double purpose of punishing the Virginia planters and trying to win the affections of the Irish, the Government of Lord North made it lawful to grow and cure tobacco in Ireland. In this condition things remained during the 18 years of Irish independence, and the permission to grow tobacco in Ireland was still expressly continued by the Articles of Union. By an act, however, of 1 and 2 William IV. the Act of Lord North was repealed, and from that day a fine of £100 is imposable on any person growing more than one pound of tobacco in his garden. There can be no question that in certain districts where the soil was suitable large profits were earned. The county of Wexford, and the neighbourhood of Enniscorthy in particular, was the most favoured spot in this respect. As a proof of this the records of the debates in Parliament are sufficient, and we have also other authority to the same effect. In the Dublin Penny Journal, December, 1832, there is to be found an article bearing on this subject. In relating the account of an interview with a tobacco farmer from county Wexford, the writer gives some interesting information as to the value that could be extracted from Irish soil by the growth of the now forbidden plant. A young man from Enniscorthy had been over to Maryland, and on his return brought with him some seed, and encouraged his brother to venture on it, and from half an acre £100 had once been produced. Holding a farm of 16 acres this man made a profit of £1,200 in seven years. The tobacco sold well because it was Irish, and the prohibitory act lately passed was viewed with much disfavour and dismay. What has once been might be again, and it is surprising that for so long a time the Irish farmer has been content to remain under a restriction apparently so unfair, and opposed to all the tendencies of modern legislation. It is frequently asserted that the climate is unsuited to tobacco, and that it cannot be profitably cultivated, but in face of the weight of evidence existing to show that a profit used once to be obtained from its growth this objection cannot be considered of much value. In any case, the abolition of an artificial restriction would soon prove the truth or fallacy of this assertion, for, if it cannot be produced at a profit to compete with foreign tobacco on equal terms, tobacco, like wheat, would again cease to be cultivated. The farmer would soon prove to be the best judge of the profit or loss derived from the transaction. One objection, no doubt, is that it is an exhausting crop to the soil; but the same objection, only in a lesser degree, applies to flax, which has been for many years past the mainstay of industry in Ulster. And, as tobacco can now be cured by steam, the influence of the weather on the process of curing is of less importance than formerly. The climate and soil appear to be as well adapted to it as they are to the potato, which was introduced at the same time and from the same source. Some short time since an interesting paper on the subject of the cultivation of tobacco was read in Dublin by Mr. J. A. Walker, at a meeting of the Statistical and Social Inquiry Society of Ireland. The writer of that paper, who, like many others, is fully alive to the necessity of finding some new employment for the unoccupied agricultural population, had taken the trouble to communicate with several gentlemen, both in Ireland and America, who are intimately acquainted with the conditions necessary to the successful growing and curing of the plant. According to the testimony of one of his correspondents, a statute acre should produce two and a half tons of dried tobacco, and if, after paying all expenses, the farmer should only realise a profit of 2d. per lb., it would amount to over £46 per acre. Another estimate placed the profit to be derived at not upwards of £25 per acre, but all accounts agree that a good and substantial profit would be realised. In France, the expense of cultivating a hectare of land, nearly two acres, with tobacco, is stated by M. Joubert (Tabac) to be about £32 1s. 8d., and the average produce to be £86 5s., leaving £54 3s. 4d. for profit to the French farmer, while even more can be made in successful seasons. The collection of the excise duties in France is not surrounded with any special difficulties, and it is not easy to see why it should be otherwise in Ireland. In the year 1870, the latest for which there is any special return, the importation of unmanufactured tobacco into Ireland amounted to 634,632lbs. This is of unmanufactured tobacco alone, and mainly for the use of the poorer classes, and exclusive of cigars, which are a luxury for the rich.

My dear Colonel

I am very much obliged by your kind letter and willing offer to aid me in obtaining this appointment.

I enclose a rough draft of what might perhaps be said upon the subject leaving you to give it that individuality and freshness which it may require.

Such a document may take the form either of a letter to myself or of a letter to the Patrons or of a mere certification.

As the appointment is in the gift of people in Edinburgh and not in London or in your congenial atmosphere of the House of Commons I doubt your being able to lobby any one whose good will can influence any of the Patrons. Sir Stafford Northcote Bart in his capacity of Lord Rector of the University is one of the Patrons but I doubt whether he will vote or take very active interest in the matter.

I am sorry that I caused postponement of your lunch the other day when I was in town from Tuesday morning until Wednesday night.
The distances are so great that it is very hopeless to attempt in such a short time looking up very many friends. but next time I am in London I shall make I trust a more successful effort to see you.

best regards and I remain

My dear Colonel

I was sorry to have missed seeing you during my brief visit to town ten days ago; but glad to learn from your hand lady that you were well and hearty, and ready as ever for your political duties.

I am rather unexpectedly become a candidate for the Chair of agriculture in the University of Edinburgh and enclose you copy of a letter which I have this week addressed to the Patrons.

The appointment is not a lucrative one; its emoluments have not averaged £400 a year; the annual attendance of students has not exceeded a score; but it is capable of being made more useful and popular.

It would be congenial work to me and now that I am resident in Edinburgh and my management of the Swan Land and Cattle Company does not fully occupy the whole of my time the Professorial duties would afford me very congenial work.

Although I am late in the field I have a fair chance of success especially if I get my friends to bear testimony to my capabilities. I shall deem it

A great favor if you can indite a few lines stating your opinion of my knowledge of agricultural subjects, my business habits, and powers of exposition. A testimonial from one who has commanded armies and navies and is one of the fathers of the House of Commons would carry weight and be much appreciated by Yours ever truly would afford the greatest recreation to lay their feet on Terra Firma, there is no means afforded for us to board the ships and provide ourselves with many things we want, or for the poor sailors to come on shore to calm and cheer and refresh themselves. I have written to some influential gentlemen urging the necessity of a pier here, and tho' they have approved of the suggestion they have failed to assist in advocating its formation. And among those Mr. Kenney

My dear Sir

I have, this moment, lit upon your kind letter of January last - of which I trust that I made proper acknowledgment, and I also discover to my grief and dismay, between the leaves of your letter, the photograph of a former Mahon, which should have ^{been} returned to you long ago - I have in my time, committed so many sins against me, to ask your forgiveness, and have on each occasion been so penitent, that conscience has become callous and one additional atrocious cannot add much to my chances of final perdition, if any of that sort of punishment can be spared from pardonless enormities - but I have still space enough in me, to ask your forgiveness - I also return the photograph herewith, and with much humiliation, determination to amend - and kind regards,

SPECIAL APPEAL.

THIS Free Hospital is situated in a densely populated and notoriously poor neighbourhood.

From the obscurity of its position, it has been hitherto less known to the wealthy and benevolent than perhaps any other Hospital in the metropolis.

That 47,536 Persons sought and obtained its help during the past year affords ample evidence of its necessity, and of the estimation in which it is held by the poor amongst whom it is placed.

It has no endowment; and is altogether and absolutely dependent upon voluntary contributions.

It cannot be too widely known, nor can it be too often repeated, that the Hospital is entirely Free to the sick poor, and to the sick poor only. Great care and watchfulness is exercised to prevent imposition, and it is gratifying to be able to state that attempts in this direction are now very rare.

In addition to the urgent need for funds to meet current expenditure, a Special Fund is being raised for the NEW HOSPITAL, now in course of Erection in the Kingsland Road, to complete and furnish which a sum of £30,000 will be required, and which, when finished, will contain 160 Beds, to be apportioned as follows:—

Medical Wards, Male and Female	...	...	48 Beds.
Surgical	"	"	48 "
Accidents and Special Cases	...	...	28 "
Jewish Wards (Men, Women and Children)	...	...	36 "

The Jewish Wards, with separate Kitchen, &c., are in a distinct portion of the Building, and are supplemented by the most perfect arrangement for the strictest compliance with the religious, culinary, and sanitary requirements of this section of the community.

The entire absence of Hospital accommodation in the North Eastern part of London has been long felt and will now be supplied. Any Contribution you may kindly forward will be thankfully received and acknowledged.

A Donation of £10 10s. constitutes the Donor a Life Governor of this Charity.

A Donation of £5 5s. constitutes a Lady a Life Governor.

A Subscription of £1 1s. and upwards constitutes an Annual Governor so long as continued.

Cheques should be crossed "GLYN & Co."

Dear Sir.

I had hoped to have had the pleasure of seeing you this evening. in reference to my case. which has assumed a new aspect. You will recollect that your interest and great kindness were the means of reopening it. by getting the
