

Copy - Max Mason

PD

Chicago, March 23, 1925.

President Ernest D. Burton,
The University of Chicago,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Burton:

I wonder whether this would not be a pretty good time strategically from his point of view for William Randolph Hearst to establish a School of Politics? With the present administration not being very well able to control the legislative bodies, it occurs to me that strategically there might be some value in Mr. Hearst's coming out throughout the land with his announcement that he had established at the University of Chicago such a School. Understand he is greatly interested in California but such a thing would not be appropriate there. It would require either the Middle West or New York, with the Middle West the stronger contender in my opinion because Hearst's service extends throughout the country with Chicago a logical center.

Perhaps a School of Journalism to match the Medill School of Journalism at Northwestern, combined with our School of Politics might also have some appeal to Mr. Hearst, but I am not very favorable to this project, although would incorporate it if he wished.

I am inclined to think Mr. Hearst wants to be President and I believe the School of Politics would give him great publicity.

For your consideration.

Yours cordially,

HAROLD H. SWIFT

HHS*GB

Chicago, March 22, 1922.

Breathagnet Breast D. Burfoot,
The University of Chicago,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Burfoot:

I wonder whether this would not be a better way than to do it to have the mail handled by the Post Office Department rather than by the present administration and to have the Post Office handle a majority of the business if possible, if necessary to secure a sufficient number of postal employees to do this.

It would be better to have the Post Office handle a majority of the business if possible, if necessary to have a sufficient number of postal employees to do this.

It would be better to have the Post Office handle a majority of the business if possible, if necessary to have a sufficient number of postal employees to do this.

It would be better to have the Post Office handle a majority of the business if possible, if necessary to have a sufficient number of postal employees to do this.

It would be better to have the Post Office handle a majority of the business if possible, if necessary to have a sufficient number of postal employees to do this.

I am inclined to think Mr. Heiser, but I am not very satisfied with his proposal to have some other person handle the business if possible, if necessary to have a sufficient number of postal employees to do this.

For your consideration.

Yours cordially,

HAROLD H. SMITH

HHS:GB

The University of Chicago

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Office of the President

Jde

April 20, 1925.

Recd
file

April 20, 1925

My dear Mr. Moulds:

I did not call up Mr. Hearst.

I could not reach Roy D. Keehn and I had so little time in which to reach Mr. Hearst that I preferred not to act so hastily and without preparation.

But the matter needs study and consideration with a view to my seeing him here or in New York. When I approach him I want to do so on his best side fully prepared myself.

We will consider this further.

Very truly yours,

Ernest Burton

Mr. John. F. Moulds,
1703 Lytton Bldg.,
Chicago, Ill.

EDB:CB

THE EDITIONS OF CHICAGO

CHICAGO UNTIL

WHERE THE PAPER

1870-1871

that you are doing for him and I have asked, if you don't mind telling me, who is the author of the little book on the art of fox hunting? I have been unable to find any information about that author so far, and will appreciate your help in this connection.

Very sincerely yours, ERIC H. KELLY
Editor of the Chicago Tribune

Eric H. Kelly

Eric H. Kelly

ERIC H. KELLY
Editor of the Chicago Tribune
1870-1871