

Professor T. C. Chamberlain,
University of Chicago,
Chicago, Illinois.

Madison, Wis., January 11 1897-1899

119
My dear Professor:- If I have delayed answering longer than you expected it is only because I am fully conscious not only of the honor, your very kind letter does me but of the great responsibility involved in accepting the invitation tendered. My health has not been good during the winter seasons since returning from Washington and I am constantly hard pressed with professional engagements.

I am, however, very anxious to make the address as it would offer, if I rightly judge the occasion, the opportunity to say somethings apt to the times, bearing on the present tendencies, away from the form of government established for us, and the dangers threatened: in other words government by the minority or the menace of the machine. If you think something along this line would not be unfitting I will, barring another breakdown in health this winter, deliver the address upon the 22nd of February.

I am more grateful to you Professor than I can express in words for the opportunity this invitation offers and for your generous words personal to myself.

Will you kindly express to President Harper my appreciation of the high honor which this invitation confers upon me?

With sincere regards and cordial remembrances from Mrs La Follette to Mrs Chamberlain and yourself, I am

I am faithfully yours,

R. M. La Follette

Professor T. G. Chamberlain,
University of Chicago,
Chicago, Illinois.

My dear Professor:- If I have delayed answering longer than you expected it is only because I am fully conscious not only of the honor, your very kind letter does me but of the great responsibility involved in accepting the invitation tendered. My health has not been good during the winter season since returning from Washington and I am constantly hard pressed with professional engagements.

I am, however, very anxious to make the address as it would offer if I rightly judge the occasion, the opportunity to say something apt to the times, bearing on the present tendencies, away from the form of government established for us, and the dangers threatened: in other words government by the minority or the menace of the machine. If you think something along this line would not be uninteresting I will, during another breakdown in health this winter, deliver the address upon the 22nd of February.

I am more grateful to you Professor than I can express in words for the opportunity this invitation offers and for your generous words personal to myself.

Will you kindly express to President Harper my appreciation of the high honor which this invitation confers upon me?

With sincere regards and cordial remembrances from Mrs. La Follette to Mrs. Chamberlain and yourself,

I am faithfully yours,

R. M. La Follette

Madison, Wis., January 11, 1897.