of Yale University.

We, the ~~President~~^{the}, Trustees, and Faculty^{ies} of the University of Chicago, having been invited to share in your rejoicings upon the completion of two hundred years of Academic existence, send you our sincere congratulations. Yale College has nobly served the purposes of scholarship and honorable living which her founders were zealous to promote. The names of many of her professors have become household words with scholars throughout the world; the names of many of her alumni are associated with the highest ideals and achievements in our colonial and national life. Into this heritage of an illustrious past we, with all American institutions of learning, and all American citizens, have entered. It is our hope, as it is our conviction, that the century to which Yale University, with enlarged resources and an ever-growing body of devoted sons, now passes, will richly fulfil the splendid promise of the two that are closed, and will place our American scholarship and our American citizenship under an ever-increasing debt of obligation

YALE UNIVERSITY

NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT

August 2, 1916.

Secretary, University of Chicago,
Chicago, Illinois.

My dear Sir:

The final scene of the Yale Pageant (to be given in the Yale Bowl October 21, 1916, in commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of the coming of Yale to New Haven) shows Yale as the Mother of Colleges. In this scene we try to visualize the quite remarkable influence Yale and Yale men have had in inaugurating and in shaping the policies of many important colleges and universities in this country and also more recently in the countries of the East.

Yale's graduates were the first presidents of at least nineteen important American colleges; she has contributed more than one president to several institutions, and in other ways Yale's influence has been a factor which many colleges have gladly recognized.

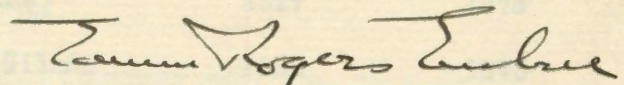

In the Pageant scene it is desired to refer to Yale's influence in building up thirty important institutions, of which Chicago has been selected as one.

We trust that the officers of the institutions chosen will not be unwilling for Yale thus to show her just pride in her association with their upbuilding. While it is not easy to single out any fixed number, the thirty institutions listed on the enclosed sheet seem certainly to be among those at once most important and most clearly bearing marks of Yale influence.

We are writing this letter, first, to make sure of the entire willingness of the University of Chicago to be included in the list and, second, to request you to send pictures (not necessarily of large size) of one or two of the older or more characteristic of your college buildings, from which reproductions in wood may be made for use in the Pageant.

I beg to remain, Sir, with high respect,

Very truly yours,

Secretary Pageant Committee.

Mr. E. R. Embree,
Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut.

Dear Mr. Embree:-

Your favor of the 2d inst. addressed to the Secretary of the University is handed to me by that gentleman. The University of Chicago would be entirely willing to be included among those in whose establishment Yale has had a large influence. As you are well aware, our first President, Dr. William Rainey Harper, was called from the Yale faculty, and his first University Examiner was Professor F. F. Abbott, now of Princeton, who was also called from the Yale faculty. The first faculty meeting I may say consisted of three,- President Harper was in the chair and Professor Abbott and I were the other two, I being myself a graduate of Williams College. So you see that in the first faculty meeting Yale had a two-thirds vote.

With sincere regards and best wishes for the entire success of the pageant, I am,

President Henry Pratt Judson,
University of Chicago,
Chicago, Ill.

My dear Sir:

The Corporation of Yale University has appointed a committee of alumni, of which I am the Secretary, to consider various problems of university administration and organization, both financial and educational, and asked them to present suggestions for the future development of the University.

The work of the Committee has thus far been preliminary in character, the aim being to study the main differences in structure and policy of other universities. In cases where the difference from Yale's is very great, the Committee has sought the views of those in authority and a statement as to their experience.

I should like very much to have the opportunity of meeting you and of learning something of the University of Chicago. Knowing your friendship with Mr. Elijah R. Kennedy I recently asked Mr. Kennedy to give me an introduction which I believe he has done by mail. I expect to be in Chicago about the latter part of next week, or the early part of the following week, that is about Sept. 10th to 12th, and I should appreciate it very much if I might take the chance of seeing you. I am indirectly acquainted with Professor Tarbell of your faculty and recently wrote him, but am afraid the letter was misdirected as I have not heard from him.
