Dear Dr. Talbot,

Christmas brought me a wealth of letters and as a result I feel once more that I am in touch with my friends and know what they are doing and how they are. Some of the letters travelled by air others by sea, but now that the Mediterranean is open there is not very much difference in the time letters take. I imagine that all mails are subject to priority and perhaps air mail that is not urgent business gives way to important unofficial as well as official mail. Also our forces on this side of the world are constantly growing larger and all feel that priority in news from home belongs to them. So instead of fretting and grumbling because mail is slow I think we should rejoice that purely personal letters come through as quickly as they do.

Now that Christmas week is over, we realize how rapidly the year is passing - almost the second semester. We also found it hard to realize that there was a War not far off. We had our dinners and eggnog parties; danced and sung; had Christmas trees and puddings and sweets, all in the traditional manner. Perhaps we should have cut these out, but I am sure that this short respite did much to ease the tension and give us new energy for the work and what ever else may lie ahead.

We had our Faculty and Staff guest dinner Christmas Eve with just about a hundred present, almost capacity seating for the diningroom. It is true that although our purchaser searched up to Adrianople and down to Adabazar and Brusa he could find no more than 7 geese, but the turkey with breadcrumb stuffing was so good that no one missed the roast goose and apples we had planned for. This year too flour is somewhat easier to find and so once again we had Christmas pudding brought in blazing and with two huge ones borne aloft one on a marvellous aeroplane and the other on a battleship. The chef and carpenter Hagop worked together on those and guests were nearly overwhelmed with their grandeur. One thing that I am always conscious of is that out here servants love a real party and cooks, waiters, and even dishwashers in the serving room enjoyed it just as much as we did. Guests were just as varied as our Faculty and Staff. One group of the four youngest staff members, girls who graduated two years ago, had a group of their friends at a gay table for 14 and had a happy time dancing in the Marble Hall. Some wore flowing evening gowns and dress suits, others were in short frocks and business suits. Shortage of gasoline means few private cars and fewer taxis willing to come out to the country; and many of the Americans in the Embassy and other bureaus of our Government travelled out here by air and fifty pounds doesn't give much room for dress suits.

Does this sound very strange and frivolous? If so, just consider it a short interlude, because we are doing hard work with large classes and overcrowded dormitories and dining rooms. We were happy to get reinforcements from America this year, Miss Gurney and Miss Tesar returning and Mrs. Seelye coming out to join her husband and carry a full program of Preparatory English. The English Dept. is in better shape than for several years and we hope we can maintain it at that high level.

Next we need help in Mathematics and Science in the Preparatory School, but I realize that scientific and mathematical men and women are probably forbidden exports except for military purposes.

Coal has been scarce and expensive but fortunately we have had no real winter weather as yet. Of course there may be a sudden change in the weather any time and February and even March are often our coldest months.

Your letter of Oct. 6th was greatly appreciated. I am sorry the censor cut my letter of March 23rd. I know the reason & was to blame. One of the general regulations is that no cables may be quoted directly. I forgot that & gave the exact words of Mr. Stand's cable. Probably the censor who read the copy that went to you was strict in interpretation of rules & so cut it out. On the other hand no one else to whom that letter went reported any mutilation. I was grieved to hear of Dr. Brown's death. He will be a great loss to the Trustees & although we have two Vice Presidents, Dean Sildershuve & Dr. Goodsell, neither one has much time to give to College matters. Hsuejün Tseng said that he considered Dr. Brown the perfect example of an American scholar & gentleman.

Don't worry about my health; I have learned how to conserve my strength & to relax. Of course I miss Dr. Wright all the time but Bay Peking is splendid & all cooperate finely. With best wishes for your continued health & strength & appreciation of your Christmas remembrance I am, most affectionately yours,
Eleanor D. Brown

Dear Dean Talbot:

Recently I have been reading your book entitled "More than Lore." I am heartily ashamed that I have not had time to read it before. I find that the book has greatly increased my appreciation of yourself and your colleagues and our University as a whole. It has filled in vividly the early decades of the University history prior to my arrival on the campus. Also it has brought vividly to my masculine attention important phases of the University's life which previously had been almost a complete blank to me. I heartily hope that you got as much fun out of writing the book as your friends derive from reading it.

Cordially yours,

Dear Miss Talbot:

Your letter which was mailed in Chicago on January 14 and addressed to me at the U. N. A. Congress, Orchestra Hall, Chicago, has been delivered to me only today and I thank you very much for it. Unforeseen circumstances obliged me to cancel my speaking engagement in Chicago on January 14 and I suppose that is the meeting you refer to. In any case, I am very sorry that we could not meet.

With kindest remembrances, I am

Feb

Dear Miss Talbot,

The loss of hope of reaching you almost paralyzed me. I have not been able to write to you. My American friends here hardly ever receive letters. Whether you hear me or not I shall write about the events that passed in my life since the last letter I wrote.

I am still the principal at the Girls Lyce in Smyrna. I enjoy working here as much as I did the first year. There is so much to be done... It is enough to keep one every minute occupied.

After a rather uncomfortable thirteen years of married life we had to put an end to it by divorce. With many trials and limitless patience I was - in fact we were - convinced that for the sake of both of us and Sydney we had to put an end to it. Everything is over now.

I must admit that I have had a very hard time. I nearly lost all hope of myself. But during the last six months I have been feeling very well indeed. I have almost forgotten all about my recent, agonizing past. I am as fit for anything as I had been long ago. I have started to feel free and happy again. I am sure you will be pleased to know this.

I have been so terribly worried about you at times. But dear Miss Talbot a moment comes in one's life when time or space do not seem to amount to much. I am so often with you.. It is you who set my ideals. Now that with all my heart and mind I have devoted myself to ^{them} I am getting closer and closer to you. [I would give anything however to have a Saturday supper with you.] I read your "More than Love" over and over at my leisure. It is one of the forces that gives me spirit and strength. I wish I knew how you are, how Miss Breckinridge is. I have such clear and vivid images of our life at 5720 Kenwood and the University in general. They are such souvenirs that I am very happy and proud to have had them.

I wish I were as grown up as I am now when I were with you so that I could have enjoyed and appreciated more the advantages of living with you. But then, I have lived them and stored them away somewhere deep within me as very precious memories to be lived over and over again.

This year our enrolment is about 1200. Only 200 are borders. There are 48 teachers. By the end of each year I feel that I have taught and done all I knew; then I seem to regenerate. It is wonderful indeed to be able to work for others. This year we have been able to organize a private fund to help 140 good students to have hot lunches, clothing and books in order to enable them to carry on their studies.

Living such an active life within our walls we don't seem to be bothered with the effects of war. Of course there are some things that we cannot help noticing. You can very well guess that under the circumstances obtaining food for 200 borders has been one of our major problems. We all are taking it very bravely and hope all will be over soon.

I wish this letter would reach you and let you know how well and happy I am and make you write to me!

Will you please pass my love and respects and best wishes for Miss Breckinridge?

My love and best wishes always with you.

Dear Miss Talbot:

It has taken me much too long to get around to saying so, but I deeply appreciate your reading my article and commenting on it. The Journal editor asked me to write it, thinking it might help some economists to bring their ideas to focus on certain points. I often think of the fine opportunity you gave me to think about fundamentals when I studied with you. I shall always be grateful. There is a busy but interesting world of work. Sincerely

Dear Marion Talbot:
On the 18th of December,
you mailed me a "rosy"
card, with kind wishes,
for which I have longed to thank you these many weeks. I have been ill with Influenza
grippe since December
eleventh, a month ago
I thought myself well
rid of all my ailments
but, alas! another cold began, repeating all

and I must be patient,
until I am well again!
I hope the winter has dealt more kindly with you, and that your full busy life is in no
way interrupted.
For me: I have time
to be ill, as was not always the case
with me in other days
when I was touring
about the country.

III But spring cannot now, be far behind
and I look forward
to that time of more energy and ability
to answer the dear

Dear Miss Talbot:

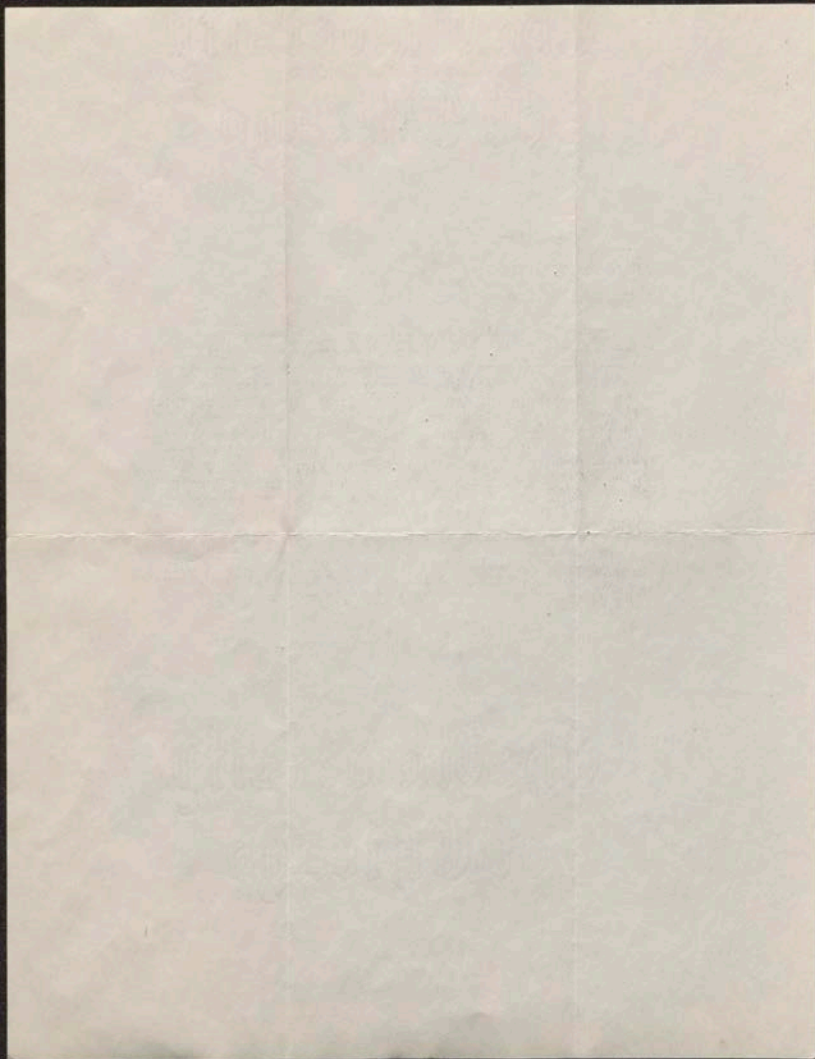

Thank you very much for your note which reached me yesterday forenoon. I am extremely sorry not to be the "hero" that you were prepared to believe me! The article to which you referred in the Maroon and the leader were splendid examples of irresponsible journalism which unhappily is rampant in this country. There was not the slightest foundation for the rumors on which those articles were based nor did the writer have any information on the subject from either myself or Dean Redfield. The latter was out of the city. I was not, but no real attempt was made to interview me. I think you will agree that this was a most reprehensible action, and lack of action, on the part of the editor of the Maroon.

Whatever my individual attitude might be on the subject mentioned, I certainly would have no right to take arbitrary action -- except the arbitrary right to resign from the institution!

Cordially yours,

OPEN LETTER TO PRESIDENT R. M. HUTCHINS

Dear Mr. President:

You can easily understand that as I have devoted the working years of my life to serving the University of Chicago, its welfare is very precious to me and I am naturally disturbed by the dissension which now exists in its ranks. This feeling impels me to make a few comments on the present situation and to urge you to believe that the earlier loyalty and courage can be restored. Your leadership is thought to be an exercise of power contravening the old democratic spirit which pervaded the University and in great measure created it and is worth cherishing. You are so truly likeable when you act your real self that it is distressing to note the increasing feeling of distrust and dislike which is growing up in this community.

When I have lived in Europe, not as a tourist, but as a student and college president, I have come in contact with many people of rather high intelligence and I have been confounded and saddened to find that in general they hold the conviction that Americans are a nation of money grabbers with little interest in any project except as a source of pecuniary gain or financial power. For Americans, in their opinion, think comfort and physical luxury are a fit measure of successful living but beauty in literature, art, and nature is not thought to be a dominant source of satisfaction. Tranquillity and leisure and the use of the mind are simply futility and waste.

If this impression is founded on fact, as I fear it is, have not our educational leaders a job to perform? I remember that when you came as hardly more than an inexperienced youth to the leadership of the great University of Chicago, among your first educational discourses was the very vigorous condemnation of using the resources of colleges and universities to enable students to make more money. This greatly cheered some of us who were trying to call the attention of our students to the growing tendency in society to measure an individual's success in his vocation by the extent he rendered services to his community rather than by the wealth he acquired. In your recent utterances, however, you seem to make pecuniary profit a necessary factor in academic interest. You have recently ridiculed the University's motto, chosen by two men of genuine character and culture, W. R. Harper and Paul Shorey, as "too florid for a raw (!) university" because forsooth the word excolatur is interpreted as "enriched." Did your Yale training give you as little knowledge of Latin or of English, for that matter, as your interpretation of this word suggests? A distinguished alumna writes that your proposed substitute "infuriates" her.

There are, fortunately for most of us, many kinds of enrichment besides money. I have found, to my regret, that experienced advisors in regard to investments usually urge the purchase of one stock or bond rather than another because it earns half a per cent more annually, and they do not take into account the other satisfactions which may be secured from the investment of money. For example, I invest annually a sum of money in the Chicago Civic Music Association. When the May festival takes place, I get my premium in the thrill of hearing those hundreds of happy young children sing lullabys and patriotic and classical songs with precision and understanding gained from expert training that I have helped furnish them. Or I may invest, with small pecuniary return, in a company whose policy toward its employees is fair and constructive when I might have larger profits from another enterprise derived from the degradation of its workers. If satisfaction from such enrichment would produce no thrill even if the dividend made it possible for me to own an automobile. Your recent announcement of 'punch the clock' contracts to be made with scholars and teachers must be based on personal knowledge of present members of the University, distinguished for their affluence derived from stipends given in acknowledgment of their services in helping promote social, philanthropic, civic, and educational projects in this community. I do not know who they are. The royalty I received last year was insignificant, but the writing of a modest little book resulted in expressions of appreciation that greatly enriched me.

Why does the University follow, so often, a policy of publicity which estranges and embitters, as in your recent addresses to members of your profession? Such a phrase as that "the first trustees were not educated men," as asserted by a representative of the University, helps turn the tide of magnificent gifts to another university. The alumnae who are told that their University is "new and raw" resent the slur cast on their diplomas, as they are also offended by the granting in two years of the degree to which they gave four. Your call for "consecrated scholarship" simply means a continuance of the lavish and loyal devotion which has been given wholeheartedly by the generation of scholars who have for the most part passed on. Why not the friendly and frank and able debates and conferences of faculties and departments which formerly created an atmosphere of progress and good will? Why not leadership rather than what is thought to be a grasp for power which stifles initiative and engenders lack of confidence?

Mr. Woodward achieved wonders at the time of the semi-centennial celebration in camouflaging this "new raw university" so that it appeared as a genuine community of scholars enjoying friendship and the advancing years in confidence and a progressive spirit.

While writing thus frankly, I realize that I was put out of commission a good many years ago and have given you a grand opportunity to indulge in your pastime of wisecracking. I may be outmoded but I have not yet joined the seemingly popular group of rubber stampers, and I remember and cherish your exhortation that university training has the power and duty to make the use of the mind its highest aim.

Yours truly,

Professor Emeritus and for thirty-three years Dean of Women

Dear Marion:

Tom Letta lay
in the Faculty Exchange till
now. I come down about twice a week.

So the fourth President is still on the rampage. I had hoped that the youthful prodigy
would some day tone down or grow up; but the enfant terrible appears to ^{be} some strong as ever, smashing institutions and notions, among other brick-a-brack.

Now about the motto.

Your version is the correct one "Crescat scientia sic vita excolatur". (In the catalog of the U of C the sic is lacking, Crescat scientia vita excolatur. Maybe H is complaining about the look sic). But as you give it, it is: "Let knowledge grow and so be human life enriched."

Of course excolatur is a metaphor refined, ennobled, enriched. There is no filthy lucre about it, or the smell of petroleum. With the that particular metaphor it can only apply to the things of this spirit.

What does H. propose?

But retain the 'sic', by all means, if only that the alumnae (and certain professors emeritae) be egged on with ^{the}
sic their girls war cry.

He is a young god, now verging to middle age, but he is not god. A University is a democracy.

Hearing your talk yesterday evening will always remain as one of the greatest experiences which we of the Chicago Branch have ever enjoyed. We are very deeply indebted to you for the inspiration of hearing the story as you told it. I wish all the Branches over the country might have shared that privilege with us.

Thank you, Miss Talbot, for coming and for giving us a truly memorable evening. Our 'thank you' comes from the depths of grateful hearts.

Very gratefully,

I am awaiting the sequel, with some eagerness. Naturally, a man so egotistical as Hutchins will not take it lying down.

There must be some kind of the reaction. But I think you won the first round.

Dear Miss Talbot:

Permit me to say that you deserve the gratitude of all thoughtful supporters of the great University of Chicago, that once was, for your open letter to Mr. Hutchins, published in the April number of the University of Chicago Magazine.

Ever since Mr. Hutchins became president of the University, I have watched with mounting dismay his wrecking of what was once a great university - in fact, one of the world's great ones - until now he has made it the laughing stock of the entire intellectual world. In all seriousness, his most recent pronouncement, also published in the April issue of the Magazine, stamps him, without doubt, as a genuine neurotic, who urgently needs the help of a psychiatrist.

I earnestly hope that before long a concerted effort will begin which will constitute the initial stimulation in a development that will culminate in the resurrection of the true University of Chicago. I should like very much to become a part of such a resurgent movement.

c/o Mr. Charlton T. Beck, Editor
The University of Chicago Magazine

Dear Dr. Talbot:

The writer is not a "distinguished alumnus," but feels impelled to make a few comments on your open letter to President R. M. Hutchins in the April issue of The University of Chicago Magazine.

This whole controversy, and especially your "open letter", to me is about on the caliber and experience level of high school seniors attempting to select a motto for their particular senior class.

Your criticism of President Hutchins' use of the phrase "the first trustees were not educated men" is small indeed. So far as my observation has revealed, it is merely the statement of a fact. What difference does it make anyway? It is no disgrace for an individual to have had less educational advantages than another, and I am not so sure that their usefulness to the University of Chicago and to their country was any less by reason of the fact that they were not educated men.

I admire President Hutchins for this and other very frank, sincere, and truthful statements. A great University cannot be built on sham and soft soap as your letter seems to indicate that you believe.

Why anyone should care whether the motto of the University of Chicago should be one group of words or another is beyond me. I am sure the motto will not in any way limit or restrict the policies or the usefulness of the University of Chicago.

In these critical times, it is to me a sacrilegious waste of time for one as capable as yourself to consume paper and the time of other people in the expression of opinion on such a minor point.

I believe that you and many others are too near the University to be able to rightly evaluate it. The "shadow" of this great institution falls even across the Commonwealth of Kentucky. In the early Christian Era it is said that mothers carried their children out to the streets in order that the shadow of a great teacher-prophet might fall upon them as he walked through the village.

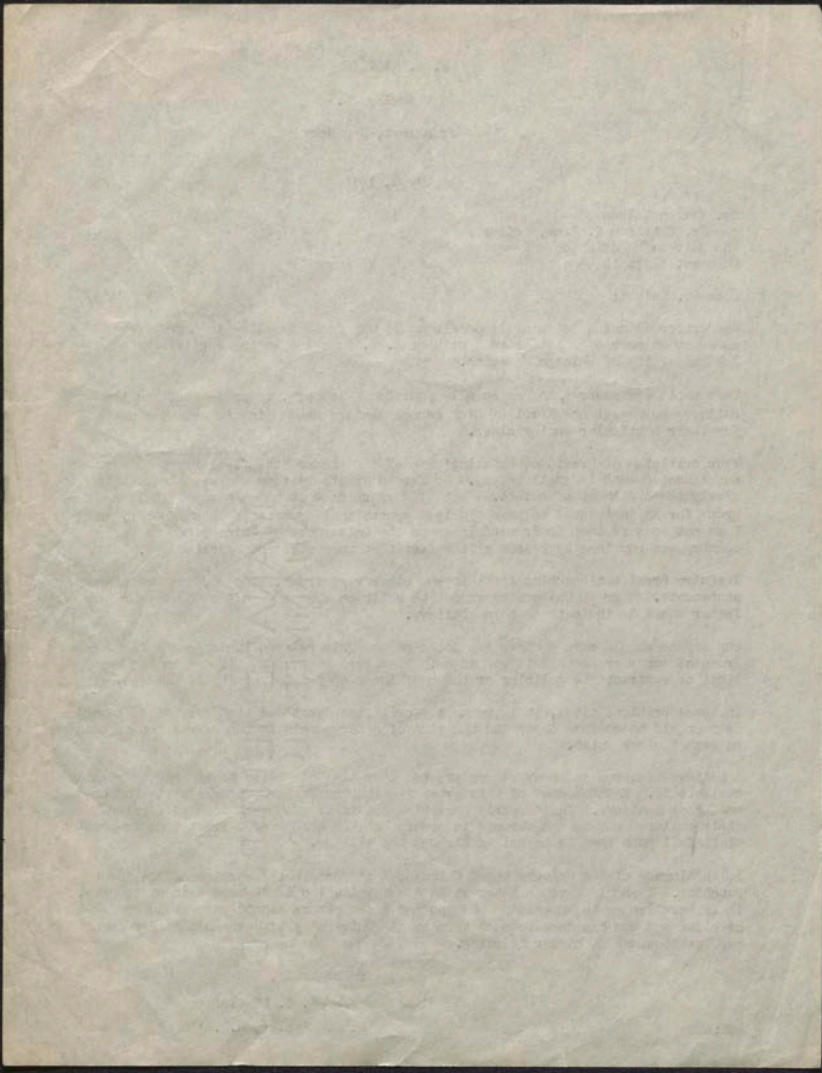

As an alumnus of the University of Chicago, I appreciate the service of President Hutchins. I should have no interest in the institution if it were dead at the top. It is hard for me to understand why you and a few others cannot understand and appreciate one who has done so much to make the University of Chicago a leader among our institutions of higher learning.

Professor Marion Talbot,

Dear Professor Talbot: Your "Open letter to President R.M.Hutchins" that appeared in the April Number of Chicago Magazine (just received) expresses exactly my sentiments. Only I wish that you might have gone even farther. Every time that I note his fresh outbreaks I ask myself where will the end be.

Hutchins's recent plea to abolish the system of professorial rank appears to be logical when viewed from the standpoint of his past record. I am informed by certain members of the Faculty of the University of Chicago that the only opposition that Hutchins has met has come from the Senate. Abolishment of the system of professorial rank would automatically abolish the Senate, or, at least, it would give him the opportunity to elevate to the Senate his own appointees whom, I understand, include many "Yes Men". The almost hopeless thing about the whole matter is that Hutchins appears to have the Directors of the University in leash and ready to do his will, regardless of the recklessness or even wickedness involved.

At times I have been tempted to sit down and write the many alumni of Chicago who are acquaintances of mine. The list is a long one, since I was in the University, off and on, for a period of some thirteen years. Upon reflection, I always decide to let the temptation pass without action. I ask myself what possible effect on "headstrong Hutchins" could be expected, even if all living alumni of Chicago were to make protest to him. Nevertheless, I rejoice when some one does protest. Your "Open Letter..." is a masterpiece.

Sincerely

I read your letter in the Alumni Magazine to my wife and ~~we~~ both agreed that you "struck twelve." I congratulate you on publicly expressing your convictions and also expressing ours.

I had my tilt with Pres. Hutchins on football & referred to the days at the University before a President there had foolishly imagined that football is "a major handi-carp to education."

Dear Miss Talbot: Good for you! I am grateful, among many other readers, for your letter to Robert Hutchins in the Alumni Magazine. What you say is only too true. It is one of the tragedies that this able, charming, intelligent man, apparently never learned what it is to be civil, courteous, and considerate to his fellow beings -- quite aside from the fact that he ought to know, as president of a large university, what excolatur means.

I rejoice also in the fact that you are still the vigorous woman we remember you being. It is refreshing to have the example of your courage and good judgment. I am sure Edgar Goodspeed, who now lives across the road (Sunset Boulevard) from us, will share my views. My wife joins me in warm regards to you and in best wishes for your continued good health,

Sincerely yours,

Wm. A. Mitze

Dear Miss Talbot:

Your letter about my book is one of the most gratifying and encouraging that I have yet received and I thank you for it with all heartiness.

I note your statement "for years I had a great admiration for the Japanese people and I have been slow to believe them to be as cruel and dastardly as I now know them to be". Only those of us who have lived for many years, as I have done, among the Japanese know that they are not all of them the cruel and brutal types which most of our people quite naturally believe them to be. Words are inadequate to express my condemnation of the military caste and all associated in their deeds, but there are many other Japanese who represent the best one can find in any country in point of character and outlook and my feeling for many of them cannot change in spite of war for I know that they also could not change, powerless as they were and are to influence their military extremists. You cannot live among people for ten years without coming to know them pretty well and I say all this, not on the basis of theory, but on certain knowledge. This is no time, however, to emphasize that point. We must utterly destroy the Japanese military machine and caste and cult and, when they have been destroyed, to take measures which will render it absolutely impossible for them to build themselves up again in future. Otherwise we shall have to fight this war over again in the next generation. When that destruction has been complete, I hope and believe that healthy elements will still be found in Japan around which something worth while can be built in future.

With

Dear Miss Talbot:

I can't forbear inserting this note into the envelope containing my official letter. I can not tell you how grateful I am for your open letter called forth by a speech by President Hutchins as published in our recent University of Chicago magazine. You said excellently and trenchantly what desperately needed to be said.

And I know of no one in a better position than yourself to be convincing
in the protest.

As a holder of three graduate degrees (M.A., B.D., Ph.D.),

VASSAR COLLEGE

POUGHKEEPSIE-NEW YORK

Department of Geography

June 2, 1944

Dear Miss Talbot:

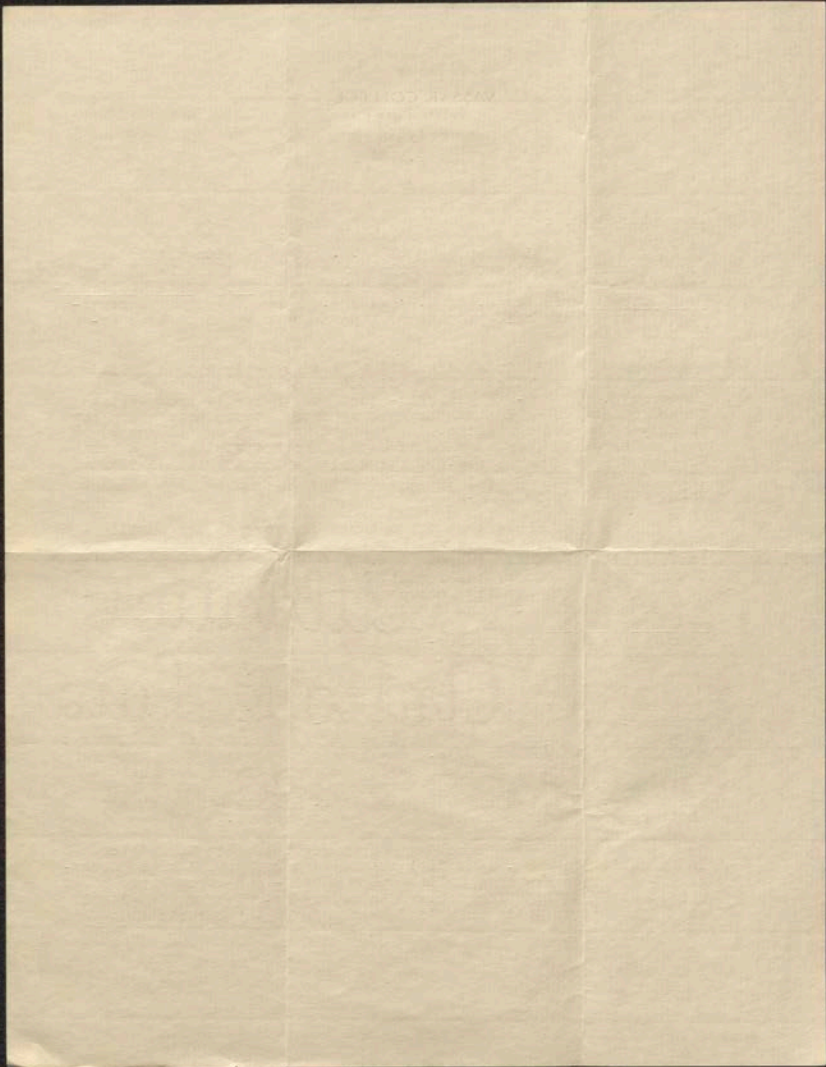

Right now, at 8:15 A.M. before I plunge into a round of college duties, I am going to write you the "Bravo" I've been intending to write ever since I read your Open Letter to President Hutchins, in the U. of C. Magazine. You expressed the sentiments many of us feel, and better than anyone else could have expressed them.

It is a great pity that a man with such a brilliant mind should have failed in the direction of his educational leadership. He has- as you said- just enough really progressive ideas to make us hope that they would prevail over those which seem to many of us retrogressive. I fear that many of us have now given up that expectation, and now believe that the University would best be served by his departure. I think his philosophy is too firmly fixed in his mind for any compromise at this time to have lasting value for the University.

I hope that out of this controversy there will come a revision of the government of the University, in which the faculty will be better represented. During the twenty years that I have been at Vassar, the faculty have been given (or have won by united effort) greatly increased representation in the government of the college. I am sending you a copy of The Governance of Vassar College, which may interest you. The initial action has to come through the trustees- and that is the difficult hurdle to get over in all these cases.

I wonder if you remember Edith Ruff Higgins. She now lives in Scarsdale and I see her frequently. She has four fine children. Her oldest boy is in the Navy- submarine service; her daughter engaged to an aviator, is in her third year at Middlebury; and she has two younger sons. She is a fine woman and she and her husband have brought up their family under ideals of responsible citizenship. I spent an evening with them recently and we read aloud Pres. H's address, and your letter. They asked me to add their congratulations to mine when I wrote to you.

I am teaching a heavy schedule this term which lasts until July 1st. In addition to my duties here, I go to Bronxville- to Sarah Lawrence College once a week- and teach three hours there. This is their first class in geography. I have been staying with Miss Warren while there and have enjoyed the association.

I must not take time to write you news of my family. Gail is still the mainstay and keeps the home. My nephew who is with her in the store, ~~has~~ been living with her in the big house this winter. My sister, Mrs. Brooks and her husband will be with her this summer. Of course I shall be there for my vacation- which I shall need for rest after this strenuous year. I return to college Aug. 27th. Students and faculty show the strain of acceleration, and I am sure education suffers under it. Perhaps it is necessary under war conditions.

One of my nephews (Grace Brooks' son) has just been ordered to the South Pacific. He is in the Naval Salvage Division. Her daughter Amelia's husband is in Naval construction work at Pensacola, Florida.

I must now be off to the library. Please give my love to Miss Breckinridge. I think of you both often, and always with appreciation and affection.

Genevieve Lamson

P.S. The friends who summer in Randolph, of whom you wrote me, are Miss Spink and Miss Willis. We hope they will be able to come to Vermont this summer.

much is involved. His letter isn't even up to the high school level. I feel pretty sad over the University, even more over our country. It is good

Dear Miss Talbot: Ever since I read your "Open Letter" in the U. of C. Magazine of April, I have wanted to write you to tell you how pleased my husband & I were with your clever way of saying what many thousands of us no doubt would like to say. What especially ticks me (with a capital T) is the disparaging reference to the new "raw" University.

We came to the U. of C. in '99-'00 - Went to John B. Setson U. Then affiliated with the U. of C. for 3 years. It had been continually associated with it since 1903. It seems to me "there were giants in those days".
Dr. Harper had 7 college Presidents on his faculty at first - I used to know all their names - The men of those days were mostly scholars & gentlemen. As I look over the departments I know best, they seem to have fallen into desuetude - I'll forbear with me while I recall with you type some of those names. - Small, Tufts, Abbott, Capps, Hendrickson, Morey, Hale, Donaldson,
the two Moogles - Foster, the two Chamberlins, Manly - Richard Green Moulton, Wood,
Michaelson, Shailer Matthews, Jordan,
Cuthrie, the Goodspeed, Volaw, Phil Allen,
Buck, Burton, Tudor Vincent, Ayall - Harr - & always Stagg - ^{Millett} of course the great innovation was the fine women on the faculty - Talbot, Reynolds, Wallace
Not all Mr. Harper's celebrated innovations were introduced before the U.

was opened. We can remember different ones that we tried out & discarded - Then as to the first trustees - "not educated men" forsooth - Martin
Ryerson, Charles L. Hutchinson, McLeish
Dr. Thomas Goodspeed -

It seems too bad that a University President should try to disparage everything that has been done for over four decades by his distinguished predecessors - Our graduates have

² contributed a great share in the development of the Arts and Sciences for the last half century - I was 39 years in the Dances Club & got in touch with most of the Ph.D.s in that line - My chief amusement at odd times is in going over a "Register of Doctors of Philosophy" '38-'39 given me by Mr. Tilley some time ago - Nearly every important position in the Universities of the U.S.A., in Canada & even in China is filled by our graduates -

Another phase of University life that has passed away was the sort of things that you & Miss Brewster did for so long - I was delighted in 1905 when Grace Smith, a student in Botany from Smith College Faculty, told me that she would see that I got an invitation to Green Hall to the Children's party - I was there with my little son - as you may remember for many years afterwards - In that way you & friends - that party for the children and your annual party for the Faculty did more than anything else around the University to promote a feeling of unity & friendship among the Faculty - I think Mrs. Hutchins has missed a great opportunity in not developing a friendship with the Faculty - A graduate of the U. of G. (Ph.D.) told me that she was present as a Prof. of a College in Georgia at a dinner for Mr. & Mrs. Hutchins - Some one asked Mrs. Hutchins if she knew some one - "No," she replied - "Well, she's on the Faculty of the U. of G.," was the answer - "Then I do not know her" -

I think Mrs. Judson's tea also set of inestimable value to the Women of the Faculty - Not merely did we meet the other members of the Faculty - but many of the worthwhile people of the World there & tell these things have meant much to me in later life - There are many others who will have similar memories & will rise up to call you blessed for the grand things you have done for the University as a whole and for the high standard you maintained throughout for University women.

I am Very Gratefully Yours Anne W. Bonner

Dear Miss Talbot:

Here's another "Green Hall girl" telling you how very much she enjoyed, admired, & agreed with your letter to Pres. Hutchins.

I kept wishing that I might return for our 35th reunion (39) & also see you so, you may well believe that I was most happy to see your picture. You look very well and quite as vigorous as your letter to the ~~Product~~ ^{Product}. Keep it up!

I am active in the local branch of A.A.W. & enjoy every reference to you in the national magazine.

I doubt if you know that I had "the joy of" getting a book out of my system. Scribner's published the second edition of This Machine Age, How our Industrial World Came to Be, in 1942. It reflects my lifelong interest in social & economic issues which grew out of the Industrial Revolution - an interest probably aroused when I lived in Green Hall with you & Dean Bucknidge.

Due to ill-health I retired from my position as Head of Social Studies in a local High School in 1943. I am gradually growing stronger.

I do hope you will recall me - I lived in Green 1906-9 at the same time another Louisville girl, Willowdean Chatterton, was in residence. I have tried always to show my appreciation of what Chicago meant and means to me by aiding in local Alumni activities, especially the annual drive. Ours is a sprawling city & we have too few Chicago meetings; tho in 1921-2 we had a good Alumni group here, of which I was Secretary, & Mrs. Spick President.

It seems natural when I write you to send my greetings to Dean Bucknidge who took a friendly interest in me because she, too, was a Kentucky girl. I have recently taken a Life Membership in the Fiske Club as a memorial to my dear Parents who were beloved in Louisville.

The Fiske collection is housed in Harper, but the Club carries on in Louisville.

I used to see Miss Emily
Rice who was my near neighbor out here; in fact I sat with her in her garden only a day or two before she left us. She was my training teacher & often chuckled over the fact that she thought I would never teach very long. Thirty-one years altogether.

If you come West my dear husband & I would love to see you & take you for a ride along our beautiful blue Pacific. When travel conditions improve we hope to come East again as F. plans to retire soon. Yours cordially & fondly,
(Mrs. Frank Perce) Estlin Goddard Clarke

My dear Miss Talbot,

I have just finished reading More Than Love and am impelled to write to tell you how much I enjoyed it. I don't know how I missed it except that I was not at the University when it was published and just happened to run across the title in a list of publications from the Press so ordered it a short time ago.

You told me in its pages so much that I did not know about the University. I particularly enjoyed the story of the gift of the Hayes Hall

And your Chapter on "The weaker Sex".
I am grateful too for the beautiful photograph of your opposite page 4 and that one of Miss Breckenridge opposite
p. 140. You have performed a real service to those of us who love
the University by recording these memories of its development.

I had read of you through Miss Breckenridge not long ago and was glad to hear that you were feeling well.

I often think of you and very pleasant but infrequent little visits
in your home - particularly the night
I was your dinner guest.

Sincerely yours,

My dear Miss Talbot:

I deeply appreciate your letter of August 19 and am extremely sorry that I couldn't answer it sooner but I have been away from the office so much of the time that it was impossible to give you an immediate reply.

You ask what your status is in the North Central Association. Your name appears on the list of honorary members of the Association. As such you certainly are entitled to be in attendance upon the meetings of the Association and to participate in them if that should be your desire. I am at the present time in the act of reading a history of the Association. You probably know that the North Central Association will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary this coming year. We certainly hope that it will be possible for you to be in attendance upon the meetings and especially upon that session which will be devoted to a recognition of the Association and its laborers these many years.

The Fiftieth Annual Meeting will be held from April 3 to 7 in the Palmer House, Chicago. We will be glad to send you a copy of the program when it is ready for distribution next spring. You will hear from us again.

My dear Miss Talbot,

Joe and I both appreciated so much the lovely letter you wrote to Mr. Daines about Joe's work, that I feel eager to tell you the sequel.

Joe had been offered some teaching work at the university that he wanted very much - other jobs too had come his way. Mr. Daines discouraged all moves, but also failed to do much about a salary adjustment. So Joe deliberated a long time within his soul whether he was valuable in one office only, and decided to see if he was not valuable also in some other office.

As a result he began Monday (16th) in a new job down in the loop, at 333 North Michigan. He will be financial secretary (tax advisor primarily) to Mr. Frey, president of the Charles Daniel Frey Advertising Agency. He will have a 5-day week, which pleases me immensely, and comparatively little overtime.

When he finally made his decision to leaves, everyone was simply grand. His own "office gang" had a farewell dinner Saturday at Lindquist's, in his honor, and presented him with a brief-case of excellent leather.

We are enjoying our house very much and Margt has grown like a weed. Although we like it out here very much, we've had every known bad bit of luck. I spent a week in the hospital in September, the furnace-men were too rushed to put our furnace back together, so we had no heat until yesterday, - and Friday the refrigerator stopped! If we can survive all this, smilingly, I think we'll be happy in our new home and new job!

We think of you often, and all of us send our best wishes and love to you,

Sincerely,
Margt, Helen, and Joe Biering

Dear Miss Talbot,

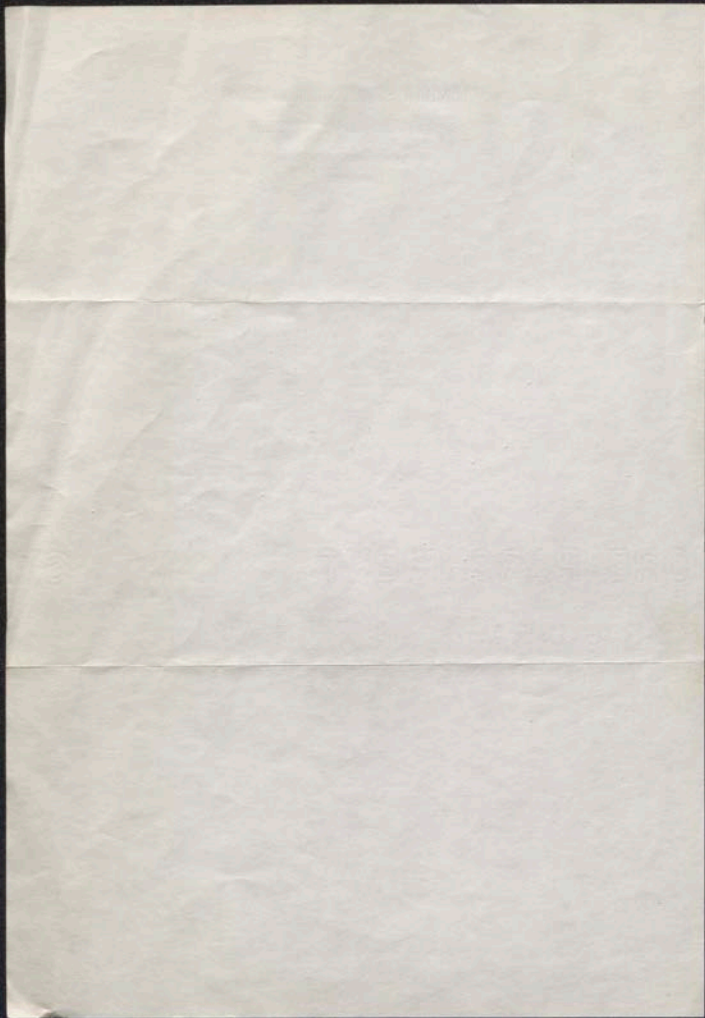

Before I have had an opportunity to get a note off to you I find you and Mrs. Biery already have exchanged correspondence over my change of work. It was not without certain deep regrets that I found it necessary to present my resignation to the University. However, I feel that I still have my foot in the door, so to speak, with my teaching. I enjoy it thoroughly, and who knows, it may develop to become a very fruitful part of my life.

Your letter to Mr. Daines was most appreciated. As to the future, my new position as financial secretary to Mr. Frey means that I will be spending some of my time on his tax problems. This means it would be no chore to continue to aid you with your tax work. If I can be of service, here is my new business telephone number - State 8161.

Mrs. Biery and Margot are visiting in Findlay just now. When they return we will plan to come visit you again.

Dear Dr. Talbot:

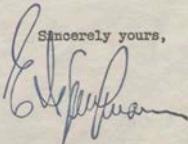

I am taking the liberty of addressing you on a matter which I am sure will evoke a ready and sympathetic response from you.

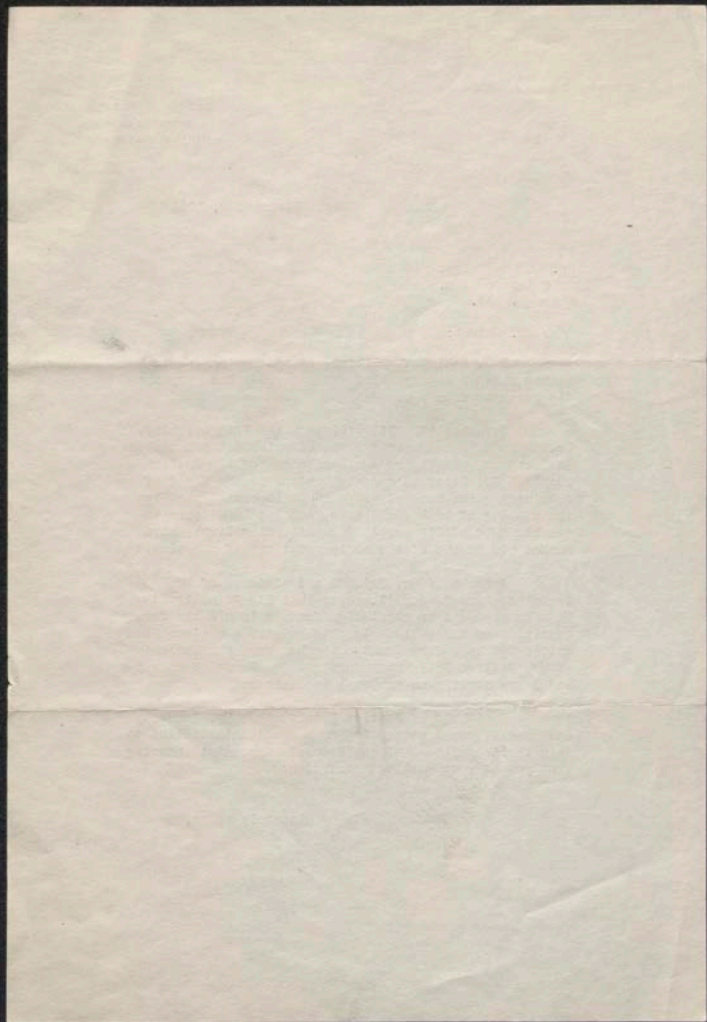

November 27, 1944 will mark the 70th birthday of Dr. Chaim Weizmann, world renowned scientist and statesman, and universally recognized leader of the Jewish people. Dr. Weizmann's contributions in the field of chemistry which have played such an important part in the winning of both world wars, and his leadership in the struggle of his people for national rebirth, have marked him as one of the truly great men of our time.

A group of us, friends and admirers of Dr. Weizmann, have deemed it proper that his 70th birthday be made an event of great significance in all the free countries of the world. In this country a national committee has been formed under the honorary chairmanship of Mr. Justice Felix Frankfurter. Mr. Samuel Zemurray and I are serving as national co-chairmen.

On behalf of Justice Frankfurter, Mr. Zemurray and myself, may I extend to you a cordial invitation to join this committee. I shall deeply appreciate hearing from you at your earliest convenience.

Dear Dr. Talbot,

My last letter of this kind was written just after July 4th and much has happened during these months. The happiest event was the arrival of four new American teachers and Mrs. Scott to reinforce our Faculty. It means a great deal to have new blood and all of the new recruits were well chosen, not only from the academic but the social point of view. They all represent the Middle West, from Illinois to Montana, and two in the English Department have degrees from Chicago. One of them, Cornelia Roberts worked for her M.A. in the Oriental Institute and knows Hebrew and hieroglyphics and regrets that she hadn't chosen Arabic. She is working hard on Turkish and making rapid progress. All but one are teaching English in the Preparatory School, and she teaches Mathematics there. Our Science teacher for the Preparatory and the Gymnastic teacher didn't come and we are very sad, but on the other hand we drew a larger number than Robert College. It is certainly much easier to operate a girls' college in war time than one for boys, although Robert College unlike American Colleges is not suffering from a reduced student body. It is particularly difficult for them to get American teachers for the Engineering School and their need is greatest in that department.

We had over two months of a very serious black-out this fall and everyone was happy when it was finally lifted last month. Students found it difficult to study and discipline problems were accentuated. One feature that added to the difficulty was the lack of flash light batteries and candles. We used old fashioned night lights with a little wick floating in olive oil for corridors and stairs, but were always afraid some one would fall or get crushed when the bell released about 200 students from library, Reading Room and Study Hall, and all were eager to get down the steps as soon as possible.

We are very happy to have Dr. Black here as President, and of course his wife is a very great asset. Personally, it means a great deal to me to have a President who has worked for many years under conditions similar to ours. He does not chafe at the regulations of the Ministry of Public Instruction and their system of inspection and control. He also thinks in terms of our institution fitting into the Turkish educational system rather than making its goal the creation of a replica of a small, American Liberal Arts College. He is working very hard on Turkish and making great progress.

We are making plans now for our Faculty and Staff Christmas party which will be Dec. 23rd. With the guests the Faculty invite, we expect about a hundred people to sit down at dinner that night. So far the weather has been mild but today the air is colder and has a wintry snap to it. Perhaps we shall have a cold spell for Christmas.

92-11-24

Dear Mr. ...

My last letter of this kind was written just after July 1st and much has happened since then. The Egyptian event was the arrival of four new American teachers and two to replace the old ones. It means a great deal to have new blood and all of the new teachers were well chosen, not only from the standpoint of the social point of view. They all represent the Middle East, two in the Middle East, and two in the Middle East. One of them, Douglas Roberts, worked for the M.A. in the Oriental Institute and more now and then. He is working hard on Turkish and making rapid progress. All but one are teaching English in the preparatory school, and the one who is teaching Arabic. Our language teacher for the preparatory and the preparatory teacher didn't come and we are very sad, but on the other hand we have a larger number than before. It is certainly much easier to create a syllabus in less time than one for boys, although a good college makes American College is not sufficient for the school students only. It is particularly difficult for them to see American teachers for the preparatory school and their need is great in some departments.

We had over two weeks of a very serious black-out this year and everything was dark when it was finally lifted last night. Government found it difficult to study and discipline problems were exacerbated. One teacher was added to the difficulty was the fact that the night teachers and students. We had an excellent night light with a little bit of light in the air for the children and adults, but were always afraid some would fall or get caught when the bell rang about 10:30 and students from Turkey, Harding Room and Study Hall, and all were asked to get down the stairs as soon as possible.

It is very happy to have Mr. Black here as President, and of course his wife is a very great asset. Personally, it means a great deal to me to have a President who has worked for many years under conditions similar to ours. He does not mind at the suggestion of the Ministry of Education and their system of inspection and control. He also thinks in terms of our last action fitting into the Turkish educational system rather than making the best of a bad job of a small American school. He is working very hard on Turkish and making great progress.

We are making plans now for our faculty and staff organization. Every one will be busy. With the faculty the faculty meeting we expect about a hundred people to sit down at dinner that night. We expect the weather has been mild but today it is cold and has a windy snap to it. Perhaps we shall have a cold spell for Christmas.

Once again I am using this for several friends adding a personal message at the end.

The Museum Palace is no more & the land has finally be sold to the Municipality for the Primary School. Nov. 11th they laid the foundation with great ceremony including speeches by the Rah, the Director of Public Instruction & others; singing by the school children a brass band, and the slaughtering of a sheep. I was very happy to receive your letter of Sept 21st a few weeks ago. There is certainly ferment in the educational world & I wonder what Higher Education will be like in the postwar period. Dean Childershere sent me her 1943-44 report & I was interested in the "Accelerated" courses at Barnard & wondered if the demand for acceleration would not continue after the war. I presume Chicago under Pres. Hutchins would lead in such a movement.

I am enjoying working with Dr. Black as President very much & particularly appreciate his background of experience in working subject to the supervision & regulations of a local Ministry of Public Instruction. He is also greatly interested in the physical plant - not my greatest interest.

My most affectionate greetings & good wishes.

March 12, 1945

Dear Miss Talbot:

While you are reading this letter, at least two American workers will be stricken with eye injuries.

Every half minute thereafter another workman will lift his hands to his face in agony. During an eight-hour shift, approximately a thousand men and women in our industrial plants throughout the country will undergo temporary or permanent damage to their vision.

Some will have their eyes torn by flying bits of steel or cinders; others' eyes will be burned by acids or molten metal; still others will find their sight growing dim because of the cumulative action of poisonous substances.

Despite the precautions taken, accidents on the home front are yet greater in number than casualties on the battle-fields. As this toll continues, the damaged eyes resulting in immediate or eventual blindness will remain on the increase.

I beg you to consider what it means to be thus robbed of sight. Can you imagine the bitter anguish in no longer seeing loved faces, familiar surroundings, and in losing all the pleasures -- all the beauty of the world? It requires sheer will-power and courage for one so cruelly afflicted to start life all over again.

That is where the American Foundation for the Blind, with which I have labored twenty years, is of vital importance. This national agency for all blind persons stands ready to help those newly plunged into darkness to readjust their lives. This Foundation champions the right of every able-bodied blind man, woman, and child to earn a livelihood and to enjoy the blessings for which God bestowed life upon humanity!

Today there is greater demand on the services of the Foundation than ever. If you give now, whatever the amount, you will give twice; for it will mean helping the blind AND America to win more quickly their battle of independence.

Full of faith in your good-will, I am

Sincerely yours,

Helen Keller

Dear Miss Talbot:

Talbot: MORE THAN LORE

We were very glad for the opportunity in 1936 of publishing your book of memoirs, MORE THAN LORE. We feel that this has been a real contribution to the life of the University and its inclusion on our list of publications has been a source of satisfaction all the way along.

We have 61 copies remaining on hand and our sales are so scattered now that we feel we should take steps to put these books where they can be of use. A copy of this letter is being sent to Mr. Beck so that he will also have the word that we are ready to turn over the stock to the Alumni Association or to make such other disposition as you or he may suggest.

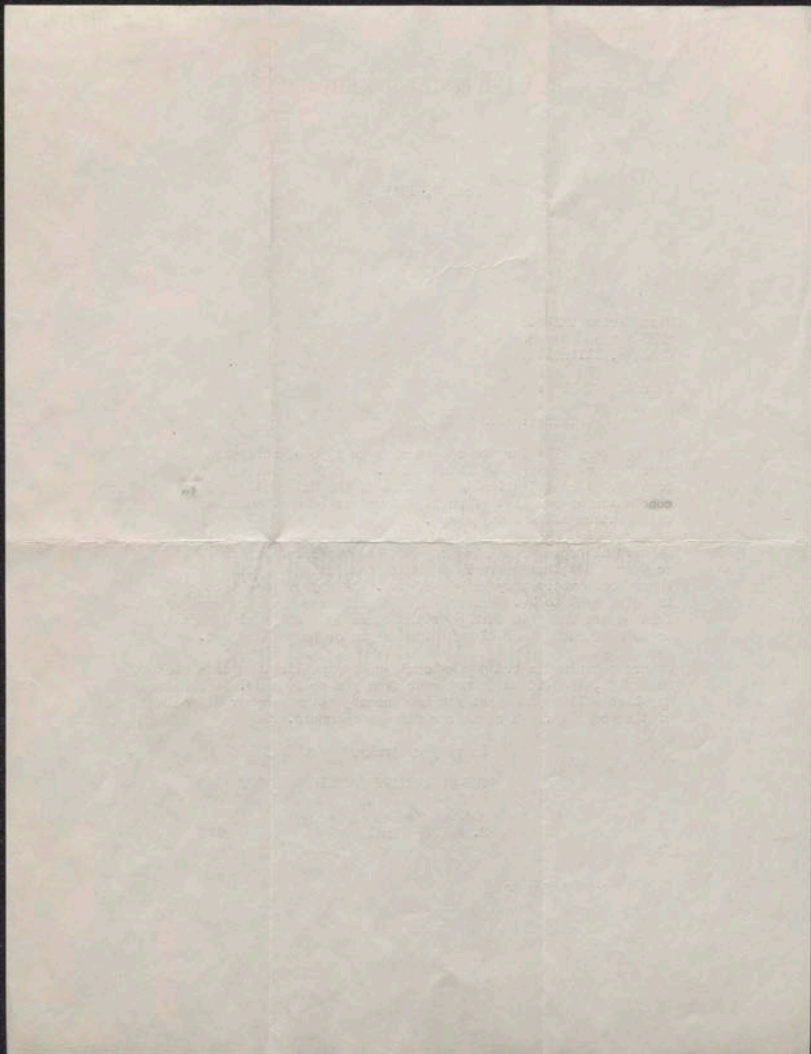

We are planning to bring the book's active publication to a close on May 31, 1945. If we do not hear from you or from Mr. Beck before May 1 we will assume that you have no objections to our disposing of the books through regular remainder channels.

Yours very truly,

Dear Miss Talbot:

For several years
a young staff member and I have been teaching a one hour course for freshmen entitled Introduction to Home Economics. We have used a mimeographed manual but were finally persuaded to put the material into book form. In order to acquaint these youngsters with some of the ideas of the people active in the movement we have quoted from some of their articles and books. I do not know why Houghton Mifflin
made the error about publishers.
The books bear the mark of having been worked at during odd hours
but those are the only kind I seem to have these days due to shortages

in staff and expansions in program.

I greatly appreciated your letter published in the Journal of Home Economics and I hope I shall be able to hear the speech of welcome on May 29 if it is to be broadcast..

Our campus is lovely with magnolias, leffodils and some dogwood.

I've just had the good news that Eva Milam is to pay us a visit late this month.

I always enjoy having word from you. It helps to renew my faith in certain aspects of home economics for which you have always stood. Many times every year I find myself being grateful to you for the help you have given me.

Affectionately,
Leta Bane

Dear Miss Talbot:

We have been to the Sound Studios here, and heard your recording played. I wish you could have watched the faces of those who listened. We were all deeply touched and impressed.

Yes, I understand very well your feeling about attempting to do too much in too little time - and as a consequence, doing only something that is superficial. However, I think your greeting does accomplish something very real and needed on our program. Everything else is directed toward future needs and the challenge and responsibility of the future. Your little message, brief though it had to be, is a reminder of the past, and of the foundations on which we build and the traditions we must live up to. I am sure it will find a response in the many members who will hear it.

Now, a request. You will think we are very greedy, but we know, too, that you are indulgent. We are having the scripts of this one-hour recorded program printed, and will include pictures of the speakers. That is the nearest we can come to the human contact which a convention does supply. We should like to use two pictures of you, the one taken a few years ago, which we already have here, and the one taken in 1892, which appears opposite page 4 in "More Than Lore." That has always been a favorite of mine, and I hope we may share it with our members generally. Could you let us have the original photograph - if you still have it? I am sure that we can see that it will be returned to you.

As always, with this hurried and harassed generation, we must say that we need this in a hurry. Promises have been made as to the date of publication, which I fear cannot be accomplished short of a miracle. So if you can send the picture, we should like to have it returned to us air mail and special delivery. If you cannot send it, would you have someone wire to us, and we will see if a reproduction can be made from the book -- provided, that is, we have your permission. I assume that the copyright would not limit use of this picture.

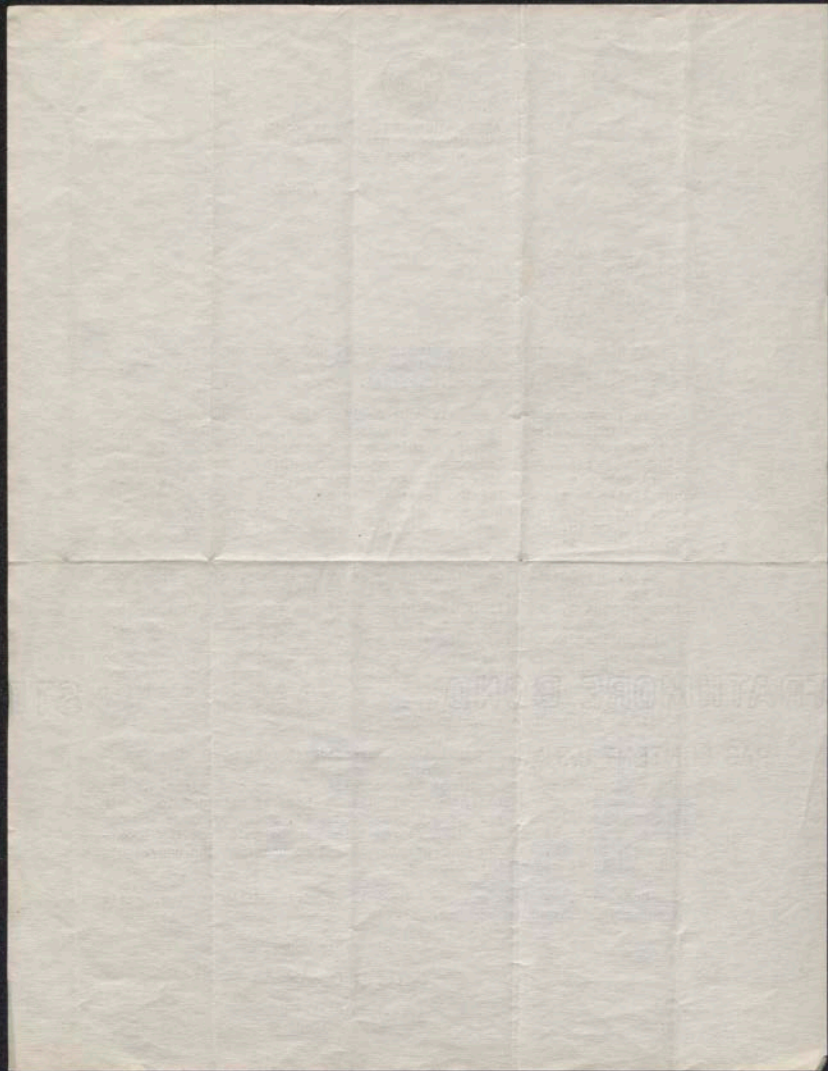

Once more, we thank you for your help in giving depth and perspective to our brief convention program.

Sincerely yours,

Thank you for your letter of April 13 in connection with the question of closing out the stock of MORE THAN LORE. By "disposing of the books through regular reminder channels" in the last paragraph of our letter of April 9 we meant that we would plan to transfer the stock from the active section of our warehouse into the section which we call reminder or surplus stock. The stock in this section is then sold to a second-hand dealer or jobber who makes the books available at bargain counter prices either in his own establishment or in stores which do this kind of book selling.

We are sure that Mr. Beck shares our feeling that the copies of MORE THAN LORE which are left at May 31, 1945 should be disposed of in whatever manner you feel is best. We suggested the Alumnae Association only because it seemed appropriate to consider that organization when thinking about the presentation of a book so closely related to the life of the University and by its excellence so well qualified to renew the interest and approval of former students.

We have not yet heard from Mr. Beck and will take no action until we hear from him and have a chance to confer with you again.

My dear Miss Talbot, It is gratifying that some item brought a letter from you. Often have I thought of you and your precepts and of your beneficent influence on the institution as well as on many men and women. I have wished that my own daughter might have the opportunity to "serve" under you.

Now as to your will and papers. May I recall for you that before my departure, foreseeing that I could not properly serve you in absentia, arrangements were made to substitute someone else for me. Miss Breckinridge was in on the arrangement. If I am not mistaken Mr. Leach was designated by you and the papers turned over to him. I shall write Mr. Leach at once to report to you whether he has them. Please forgive me if I have failed you in any way but I trust you will find everything in order. If not, please call upon me. I shall be out of the country on a flying trip from 6 May but will return by the end of the month and can then be reached through this address.

Duty continues to absorb my energies and attention but the outdoor active life has had its compensations. Also it is a privilege to command the youth of to-day. From your own experience you can appreciate the other compensations as well as the responsibilities which come with complete responsibility.

to say it is not an 8 hour but a 24 hour continuing have guided. I thank you also for the distinction which you accorded me, and if the opportunity comes later

Dear Miss Talbot,

Your canceled check for $335.⁰⁰ paid your estimated tax for 1945 in full. You will pay no more until March 1946. Likewise you will have no further reports to make - in fact you shouldn't even hear from the collector's office until next spring.

You did have a considerable amount due you at the end of 1944, but if you notice the 1944 tax return you will see that we told the collector to keep it as part payment for 1945. The $335.⁰⁰ check ~~was~~ was the net additional amount due to pay 1945 in full.

My dear Miss Talbot;

I have just finished my delegate's report for the A.A.U.W. Convention Without Travel. Now I cannot resist writing a message to you.

I am sure since your voice went out over the country on the Convention program, you have received many responses from "old Chicago girls". Your talk was a great inspiration to me. Altho I have been a member of the A.A.U.W. for over thirty years, having been a charter member of our chapter here in Superior, Wisconsin, I am really just beginning to appreciate what the organization is, and I have resolved to take advantage of every opportunity to publicize its possibilities for influence internationally and its excellent build-up for using its funds. I wonder if I am right in thinking that many members of branches never get beyond knowing the activities of their own little local organizations. Your recalling of what had been done in only sixty-five ^{years} made me very proud of the work you and your mother had done in laying the foundations.

As I sat in Duluth's beautiful Womens Club listening to you, my thoughts wandered back to the Chicago campus one spring day in 1900 when you and Miss Breckinridge stopped me to speak of the contest I had just won, in public speaking. The scholarship and fifty dollars were so necessary to me that I guess I had not thought of the winning as meaning anything else until you spoke to me and made me feel perhaps I had done something worthy.

Since that time I have taught and studied forty-three years. In September 1943, I retired at age sixty-four, after thirty-two years of teaching here in the Superior State Teachers College. The state Board of Regents made me Professor Emeritus. I am in excellent health and would not have been retired for six years, but I felt I could afford to stop and have always thought Ibsen was right about older people giving way to younger folks when they could carry on.

N.
M.
Q.

Pardon me, Miss Talbot, for speaking of such personal matters. I am presuming that you may have some faint recollection of a girl whose mother was working very hard that her daughter might take advantage of the opportunities that you and your mother thought women should have, and that it might be of interest to you to know that my work has been reasonably acceptable. The bit of recognition you gave me that day and a similar word of appreciation from President Harper one day in class, I have never forgotten.

I find plenty of things to be interested in now that I have more free time. Recently I have been persuaded "to go into politics", as my friends jokingly say. On July 1st I begin a three year term on the city school board. Confidentially, just among us women, I ran against two fine young men, friends of mine, and topped the slate.

Good-bye now. Twice your words have meant much to me. I am so glad I happened to hear you again last week. I wish I knew more about you. I wonder if you have written a book.

Most gratefully yours,

Zona Mac Quilkin

Yours

My very dear Miss Talbot,

I am late. Always one step behind. You had named me do you remember? "Procrastinator." Well, this neither explains nor excuses me. But dear Miss Talbot, having to do over one hundred little things a day in connection with my administrative duties I feel all used up by the evening. I lose my perspective at times. I cannot help living only in the present, which in reality is not living at all. Then at every two or three months I feel I have to save myself some how, usually hiding behind a cold or cough. That's when I can pull my scattered self together and feel fit to have an interview with you.

452034

This is my fourth year here at the Lycée. It is true that managing it now seems much easier than it did. But not being satisfied with what I had done before I always find myself trying something new. Therefore I am always completely absorbed in some detail. This type of work, and the way I am involved in it hardly ever gives me time for reading, writing or recreation. I don't feel tired, burdened or bored; but I miss real friends terribly. At times I feel homesick. How I do wish I were somewhere in your zone! Some time I kid myself to day dreaming. I consider applying for the job of inspecting students in the States! I get all worked up and excited. But then I have to face reality at the present and hope for the future.

I feel so happy when I hear from you. It is not sheer happiness either when I get to analyze it. Even though I cannot find exact words
I feel I am elevated in some spiritual way above the reality. I feel equal to do anything, hardships, troubles become only simple barriers.
With a child's optimism and goodness I can deal with them. Dear Miss Talbot
you have had a wonderful influence over me. Please forgive me for not writing
more often as I should.
To send me a word now
and then.

The death of President Roosevelt has caused a deep sorrow among the Turkish people. Even the simplest, illiterate people who had come to know him through "coffee house" talks mourned for him as much and as deeply as the leading people. I have heard of many families who did not go to movies or listen to music for few days - or then on again ~~and~~ mind you. This seems to be an indication of the fact that people still has a common sense and can appreciate the right, justice and good will.

With my promises to write soon again I send my deep love and best wishes dear
Miss Talbot.

P.S.

Dear Miss Talbot:

Your letter of June eighth will long be cherished. I hasten to assure you that I am never given to over-statements; you are, as everyone knows, my inspiration.

Do you wish the "fan mail" returned? I read each of the letters with a great deal of satisfaction; how very nice of these members to have written to you. I wish you could see all of the letters and convention statements, expressing the determination to really do appropriate AAUW work, that I have been receiving. In this sense, the branches got more out of this Convention-Without-Travel than they would have if we had met, for we have never had over 1500 members in attendance.

Your suggestion that the Chicago Branch have an induction meeting annually for new members is excellent. I agree with you that the record has a lasting value in this respect. Heretofore, I have stressed an initial meeting each fall when orientation should be the motive. For that purpose I prepared, "Information Please", a copy of which I am sending to you under separate cover. Much of it is based upon the History of the American Association of University Women.

Your letter to President Hutchins is masterful. How odd that he never answered.

Along with the copy of "Information Please", I am sending you a half dozen copies of the Script. I shall be glad to let you have a few more if you will tell me how many. I wish now I had ordered many more, but one of my jobs is to save the Budget, so I ordered only a few more than those numbers for which I had received orders. I think you will be interested to know that about two-thirds of our branches purchased the Script. Orders have come in since the dead line for their receipt.

Dear Dr. Talbot

It has been a long time since I sent you a letter but the work seems to pile up as never before and so until Commencements were over I did not find time for any but official and family letters. We had our Commencement June 14th, a warm, beautiful day, not too hot because of a good north breeze. The 15th was Robert College Commencement with a gale blowing and a storm threatening. However the rain didn't come until during dinner. Halide Edib was our Turkish speaker and Teofana Galtcheff-Ionescu played Schumann's Carnaval magnificently. Of course Halide was a great drawing card. I wish I could enclose a photograph that came out in one of the local papers because it shows the stage when Halide was speaking and gives an excellent picture of her as she is now. Dr. Black, Hüseyin Bey (Bay Pektaş), and I come out clearly, with the Seniors behind us on the stage. It was really most impressive and everything went like clock-work. Following the usual custom, the classes of 1940 and 1944 were invited to return the night before Commencement and remain until after the exercises. An unusual percentage of the 5 year class were married and had small babies so that only three were able to spend the night. Of course there was a good turn out from last year's class. On Commencement morning Miss McKillop had the Library opened and her assistants on hand, so that the reunion Alumnae had a fine chance to read magazines, look at Vogue and see the new books we received in February. Halide's husband, Adnan, spoke at Robert College and gave a really brilliant address. He has been far from well so we were afraid that his voice might not carry, but he spoke with ease and fervor and seemed to enjoy speaking.

Here V.E. day was celebrated with great enthusiasm. The Blacks and I attended a Garden party at the British Embassy on the 9th. Then on the 16th, after our American diplomats were no longer in mourning, the Governor gave a Victory Ball in Dolmabahçe Palace. I have never attended a better organized affair or one in a more beautiful setting. The weather was perfect and the great doors of the ball room were wide open onto the terrace facing the Bosphorus. The O.W.I. had their recording apparatus there and have shown the film in town several times. I went to the Ball with the Blacks and Mr. Moore and when the film is shown we are announced as we enter the ball room and then shown as an official escorts us across the room to seats at the far end. The great chandelier was gorgeous, and as one of our Vice-Consuls said - "Oh it's a child's dream of a Palace come true". The buffet, which was opened at midnight by the Governor and the wife of the British Ambassador, was elaborate. I enjoyed a big plate of strawberries, -the first of the season- and two bananas more than anything else. When we were leaving, Dr. Black gave the policeman at the top of the stairs the number of our car, we walked down the grand staircase, crossed a small part of the garden and terrace--the whole not taking more than three minutes--but when we reached the curb there was the car just driving up.

Once again we already have a long waiting list of applicants for admission as boarders next year. We are giving an entrance examination in general knowledge--somewhat like the Scholastic Aptitude tests given by some American Colleges. At the level of the introductory students, who hope to be freshmen after learning English, we are giving a Turkish version of a composite of 5 or 6 American achievement and intelligence tests. Şahire Muhtar Çilli, Siret Neçati Unou, and Zekiye Osman Molaoğlu have worked out the form and I believe it will be an interesting experiment.

Dear Miss Talbot:-

I'm very pleased to own your book, - You are getting me deeper and deeper into your debt, you really must let me do something for you.

Nine years ago a friend
whom you gave your book allowed me to take it, and so I do know about it, at the time I said to my - Self - "some day I'll get one for my library" but I just didn't - then this friend came last April to make her home with me, and bought the book, and has

it in her book-case; She is a woman who has three degrees from U. of C. taken while her sons were taking their degrees. She is Mrs.
Lena B. Mathies, whom I call Auntie, and it was June 11, 1936 you gave her a book.

She and two friends lived together in Washington, one friend is in a Sanitarium and one died, so I invited her to live with me.

I think it might be interesting for you to come and get better acquainted with me and my "family" - and suppose come day soon when you are free - you let me

call for you, of course I'll see that you get back safely. How would next Thursday fit in with your program? Friday?
I'm happy to be your
new friend

Dear Dr. Talbot,

Since writing to you in December I have received two letters from you, Dec. 11, and March 11th. I am enclosing one of my circular letters which give you the general news & am simply adding a few lines of general news as well as commenting on your letters. I thank you for your kind remembrance which was duly entered on my bank statement. The censor decorated your letter of December 11th with a gorgeous array of rainbow colored lines, apparently a test for secret writing. For a long time the odor of them really was very strong. On the other hand that of March 11th had no indication of any censoring.

I am glad to say that Dean Eldersheim has been most active as President of the Board. Her notes are brief but satisfying, because she speaks of "our College" & one of my College. She was a fine choice for San Francisco. I wonder if you have heard that the Scott's only son, David was killed in France. He was only inducted about a year ago & was killed just before Christmas, a lad barely 19, & not gun fodder type, - if there is any such type. It has been a cruel experience and it was indeed fortunate that Mrs. Scott was here with her husband and teaching a full program for us. In such circumstances work is one's salvation.

Our winter was long and hard & then in March we had a bad epidemic of grippe which filled our infirmary & hit the faculty. At Charter Day - the 20th - Miss Inghit, Mrs. Aylan, Miss Tesar, a new teacher and I were all in bed. Dr. Black caught cold on the stage & so a secret was ill on Robert College Founder's Day three days later.

Please give my best greetings to Miss Buckenridge.

Affectionately yours 90884

Reverend Brown.

I am enclosing a copy of one of our menus. We get plenty to eat, much more meat than I like, & you get at home. It is often not a well planned meal - because our students often ask for poor combinations. - The Head of the Culinary Department is a good purveyor but knows little of scientific planning. Of course some things can't be found - that gives him a partial alibi.

Dear Friend:

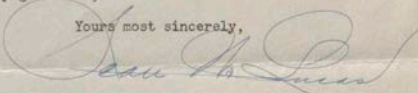

I am in receipt of your communication of recent date, and wish to thank you for an expression of your views.

I am happy to advise you that I shall support the United Nations Charter in the Committee on Foreign Relations as well as on the floor of the United States Senate.

As you know, I have long been a sincere advocate of an international organization to accomplish everlasting peace. The beginning we have made at San Francisco is most encouraging. I have no doubt that in the immediate future the Senate will ratify the Charter.

With every good wish, I am

Yours most sincerely,

Dear Miss Talbot:

It is difficult for me to express myself in reply to your kind letter regarding the passing away of my sister. She lived very happy and useful life and passed away instantly in the old home which she had many times expressed the wish to do.

I am fully aware of her contribution to the University and pupils and friends the country over.

Please accept my heartfelt thanks and appreciation for your letter.

Park Oteli - Bursa

Dear Dr. Talbot,

Again the time has past! In spite of my good intentions again I am late in writing to you. I am sure you sympathize with my condition and excuse this drawback of mine.

I was so happy to hear the good news about your health and enjoyed the humor in the account of it. I should love to know how you are now. I do hope you are having the best of the summer days.

At the end of June I felt extremely fatigued. Then I realized that I had had no vacation for the last four years. Doctors thought I should go to some quiet place immediately and gave me two months of rest. I left Izmir on the 25th of June for Bursa. My spirits were very low. I was almost a wreck. I thought I could never pull myself together again. (Therefore I could not write to you in that state of mind.) But during the whole month I did nothing but sleep and bathe in the hot springs which are supposed to do you no ends of good. I must admit that they did their share in fixing me up. But of course the quiet, the beautiful scenery, and the country air and sun and the non existence of any world beyond the horizon at least for a month helped me to bring me back to myself again. Even though I have some more days for rest I don't think I shall use them. I already feel equal to start working again. Is it not wonderful how one can regenerate! ^{how soon} Sydney and mother are with me. But we planned it so that we see little of each other. By the fifteenth of August I shall be back in Izmir which I am sure is terribly hot, much more so than in Bursa.

On my way to Bursa I visited Miss Burns. She seemed rather feeble to me. On the whole she was well, she told me that she had heard from you quite recently. For the next year I am planning to send Sydney to Robert College. By that time he will have finished the Turkish junior high school. His father is willing to help in paying the tuition. But it is so terribly expensive that I shall have to add a great deal more. Robert College has become entirely a rich boys' school now. Perhaps it's foolishness to attempt to send him there. But so far I have not been able to teach him English myself. In public schools it is impossible to learn it. If I had felt strong enough I was going to ask the president of the College if ^{they} could not make some reduction for the son of an alumnus. This request might be considered quite absurd because there are hundreds of boys waiting to pay the full amount. If you think it proper will you please write a note as a word of recommendation?

Personal worries of this sort enter into my head quite occasionally. I would not mind at all if Aydın finished his studies in a Turkish Lise. But as the Government is sending a great number of students to the States for higher Education it would be very difficult for him even though he had a Government scholarship without knowing the English language.

I am hoping to find a letter from you in Izmir when I go back. I hope ^{also} that I can let you know soon that I am back at the head of my school again.

I can hardly express the love and admiration I have for you and dear Miss Brukenridge. Will you please pass my respects and good wishes to her too?

With my love and best wishes to you dear, dear Miss Talbot,

Dear Miss Talbot -

Your kind note was much appreciated. Only a few can think back to the early day which we remember so well. However, the memory is precious to me.

You ask me if I go with Bowne today. On general principles yes. That is to say I agree with the fundamentals of his philosophy. I believe ⁱⁿ his Personalism & in his conception of the atom as a center of force and not a dead inert particle.

It is interesting in the light of recent developments to see how the scientific world agrees with him.

As to "theological dogma" I do not recall that he discussed theology to any extent, if at all, in his classes. It is certain I never did look to him for guidance in that realm.

His personal influence as well as his scholarship & teaching has been a great help all thro' my life.

Through his pupils who have become teachers, ministers & influential in other ways he has done much to counteract the gross materialism which was current in his day & is not absent from some present day thinking. I am glad you have found a comforting & inspiring philosophy. It is good to be at rest.

Dear Auntie,

I fear I have been very lax about writing any letters lately, as my books have only just come, and up until then I had to prepare all my lessons in advance and from my head.
But now I hope to get caught up. There are several copies of Teacher in America around, but I haven't had a chance at them
yet. I am anxious to read it.

Our headmistress is Episcopalian, as are all the teachers, and most of the girls. This being, in a very strict sense, an Episcopal school, the Mormons don't send their ~~poor~~ children here very much. You see we have a daily chapel service, which is quite lovely, following the Episcopal service, and with an Episcopal minister in charge. It sort of sets us up for the day, and instills quietness and confidence in us. We couldn't get along without it, neither faculty, nor students. There are two Episcopal churches here, one of which is the Cathedral. And the school is in a very real sense, the Bishop's school. I was very much interested in the article by Mr. Rockefeller & agree with you that it is sound, but I feel one thing - and that is, that it is an idea, and a hope of educated people, but that the majority, who are uneducated, and to whom religion is more superstition than anything else, and who cannot believe without "signs and wonders", could not swallow a national proposition like Mr. Rockefeller's. Personally I am all for it and will do all in my small power to help, but I have my doubts. I am enjoying my classes very much. I have felt that there has been a decided lack of ear-training

in all high-school courses,
and I am trying to introduce it here in combination with eye-training. It is a very interesting experiment, and so far it looks as if it might succeed.

Much love,

Edith.

Dear Miss Lebet

Thank you so much for your very kind and thoughtful letter. I have had the misfortune also to be appointed Secretary of the Faculty, and this added to the burdens of the Dean of Students Office has prevented me from doing what I very much wish to do - namely pay a call upon you.

Will you please forgive me? I should still like to look forward to seeing you at the earliest moment that I can break away from this office for an hour.

Dear Miss Lathrop,

Your kind letter of November 19th was waiting for me when I returned from Cleveland on Sunday after Thanksgiving and spent with my son and his family, and gave me a very great deal of satisfaction. And strangely enough, Margaret Rowe called me by phone this morning, to tell me about Mrs. Jackson. We had a very long conversation, and I feel that she gave me full view of her mother's condition. She has been to see her yesterday. I am distressed that dear Edith's splendid and active life is changed into inaction and uncertainty during these last two years. But she had already accomplished a life-time of usefulness, and had added much to the circle of ^{her} friends, and to the church that she loved so dearly; and her interest in the Union has been very keen. I wonder if you know of the fine gift of books on her special Station field of interest. That she has given to the library at C.L.A.

The head of the Department was delighted, and I think it gave Edith a great deal of satisfaction that she could be so liberal in her gifts. I am troubled at the great expense involved in Edith's illness - but there seems at present no other thing to do, as Margaret explained to me. I want always to keep in touch with her, and I hope if you can think of any way in which I can help you will let me know. When she lived in Cambridge, she could call on me for numerous things, and I was always very glad when she needed me. Wellesley seems near, but in reality it is rather a difficult journey for me.

I miss dear Annie Allen and my weekly visits to her all the time. Her blessed friendship has been one of the most beautiful of my life, and that I can never lose. She had a way of sharing her joys with me, always, and so for long years
I have known and loved you.

Good night, dear Miss Talbot.

Yours most sincerely
Mary Hinkley Aearns
